FOREWORD

THE CHAMPIONSHIP NUMBER OF THE MOUNDBUILDER IS OFFERED TO YOU AS A PLEASANT REMINISCENCE OF SOUTHWESTERN'S RECENT CHAMPIONSHIPS IN ATHLETICS AND FORENSICS. HOWEVER, WHILE PRESERVING THE FOND MEMORY OF PAST ACHIEVEMENTS, THIS VOLUME STRIVES TO PRESERVE ALSO THOSE PRESENT ASPECTS OF COLLEGE LIFE WHOSE MEMORY IN AFTER YEARS WILL BE MOST DEAR TO YOU, BRINGING YOU FACE TO FACE WITH THE FRIENDS YOU HAVE LEARNED TO LOVE IN OLD SOUTHWESTERN.

MANY there are who have read that inspiring little novel of Margaret Hill McCarter's entitled, "The Master's Degree." The moral of this worthy little volume is in every way fitting for the central theme of this article.

When Victor Burleigh, strong, stalwart, uncouth, yet withal sincere and honest, beheld for the first time the great stone "S" above the imposing doorway of Sunrise College, it was indeed void of any particular meaning or significance to this freshman lad.

The letter "S" in itself is a meaningless character. As void of expression as the Sphinx of Egypt, it stands for nothing, means nothing, until tradition and association have crossed the lives of many such as Victor Burleigh and opened to them the richness and beauty of a new world.

Victor soon found that "S" stood for Strife. His strong will was not used to subordination, but here he must be led into the ways of knowledge; not by crude strength of body, but by the intellectual unfolding of his brain, and in efforts toward a more perfect self-control.

He also learned that "S" stood for Sacrifice; a sacrifice of time and self for the good of others. Moreover, he learned that it stood for Service as well as for Strife and Sacrifice. The passions and desires of self for self's gain must be eliminated, and instead of the thorn and the brier, a life of unselfish service to others must blossom forth.

At the close of his senior year the final meaning of "S" came. It was Supremacy. A consciousness of his victories over Strife and Sacrifice and Service now added to his life the feeling of a conqueror. He was now Victor Burleigh in reality; Victor in the supremacy of a well-controlled, cultured and refined life.

Burleigh's experience is more or less true of the life of every college man and woman. To the freshman of Southwestern to-day the letter "S," up until a few months ago, was as meaningless as it was to Victor Burleigh the first time that he gazed upon it. Only a few months have passed, yet how different the message it bears to us now! Already we have resolved that we will forever love that beautiful, white "S" smiling forth from its field of purple. Unfortunate circumstances might prevent our ever returning, years may separate us one from the other, but now the meaning of "S" is ours forever. The strife of the first years has shown us our weakness wherein we thought ourselves to be strong. With this revelation of self has come the determination to conquer self.

The "S" of Sacrifice may yet be new to some. However, day by day, we learn that the greatest life is the sacrificial one. The life that is poured out to help others is the only one worth living. When a weary, tired Savior, at the close of a hard day of ministration, nineteen centuries ago, said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend," He touched upon one of the most profound truths of the ages. The faculty, in their instruction, unconsciously unfold before us a higher conception than we have hitherto entertained, and profiting by their example, the "S" of Sacrifice becomes the second great foundation stone of life's experience.

The "S" of Service takes on a new meaning. With a just pride and reverence, we look upon our heroes of service in the great field of life. Burns, Gray, Wells, Buck, Fisher, Von Schriltz, Whitwam, Smith, Snyder, and others dear to the Southwestern heart, prove to us by their example that only the life of service is a valuable life to society

Young men, you who have red blood in your veins, you who have purposed to gain the best in life, you who would substitute the refined and the polished for the base, the crude, and the uncouth, I hope that the "S" of Southwestern means more to you now than ever before. May the "S" that you shall win on the gridiron, on the diamond, on the basketball and tennis courts, in oratory and debate, be priceless treasures to you throughout your life.

In the name of Southwestern, may you too go forth with her Mold, Stamp, and Benediction upon your life, a worthy follower of those gone on before, a foursquare man for time and eternity.

T. A. WILLIAMS.

WHAT OTHERS THINK

The MOUNDBUILDER is an advertising medium, presenting Southwestern to the public.

The MOUNDBUILDER in the library of each alumnus will keep him familiar with his Alma Mater.

The MOUNDBUILDER will increase in value in proportion to the square of the years of your absence.

The MOUNDBUILDER is the only book that represents Southwestern collectively and individually.

The MOUNDBUILDER contains records of honors won for Southwestern by your friends and classmates.

The MOUNDBUILDER insures the only satisfactory method of living over again those "Dear Old College Days."

The MOUNDBUILDER is a means of generating a spirit of enthusiasm as its pages are gleaned by younger generations.

The MOUNDBUILDER is irresistibly attractive and unique in its presentation of the various departments of Southwestern College.

The MOUNDBUILDER contains portraits of noted debaters, orators, and athletes who have gained more than local recognition, besides pictures and scenes from college life.

Each student is under obligation to support the MOUNDBUILDER Staff in its publication of this book which is a general representative of Southwestern College Life.

FACULTY

FROM THE PRESIDENT

SOUTHWESTERN COLLEGE sends greetings to that great body of young manhood and womanhood interested in higher education as a preparation for the activities of life. In this issue of The Moundbuilder, the class of 1916 represents those various activities provided by Southwestern for the development of the physical, mental, and moral in manhood and womanhood. It is the quality of character, represented in her Junior Class, for which Southwestern stands; a physical being trained to be obedient to a mentality, which, in turn, is subservient to those moral qualities which are the crown of all well developed character. In this the young people of Kansas excell. With brow sun-crowned, with cheek wind-kissed, they become fit sons and daughters of a race of heroes who touched the virgin soil of a material world and made it produce a material wealth, unparalleled. They in turn will touch the virgin soil of community life and produce a type of citicenship worthy of their forebears. Into such hands are willingly committed the future interests of church and state.

GREEK AND FRENCH Departmental work in an institution of learning, in these very modern days, is generally valued according to its immediate and apparent utility. This method of valuation causes many students to look askance at courses offered in Greek and Latin, but no one can become acquainted with a people in its soul yearnings and aspirations, and feel its real worth save through its language.

Because of their great contributions to civilization, the Greeks have proved to be a constant source of interest to the student of human nature. Then too, no student so clearly grasps and appreciates the subtle richness of the English language without an acquaintance with the language and literature of the Greeks and Romans.

The courses in Greek are arranged to give a broad view of the ancient Greeks as they led out into history, philosophy, and oratory. A course in Greek and Roman Mythology is offered to all students, being required, however, of those majoring in the department.

In addition to the fundamental work in French Grammar, courses are offered in Seventeenth Century Drama and in the Romance literature of a later period.

THE DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY AND PHYSICS is concerned with the study of the composition and properties of matter, and the manifestation and transformation of energy.

Through the conveniences of extensive laboratories and apparatus, considerable original research work is being done aside from the regular text book work. Non-specialized courses are offered to students desiring but a general knowledge in these subjects, but to those who wish to do further work in Medicine, Pharmacy, Mechanics, etc., or who wish to teach science, more specialized courses are open, such as Organic or Agricultural Chemistry and Electricity. Courses are also offered in Geology.

The efficiency of the department is manifested in the confidence which the people of Winfield have shown in it. Two industrial scholarships are held at present by students in the department, one being offered by the Winfield Commercial Club for soil analysis and the other by The Alexander Milling Company for the analysis of its own products.

THE DEPARTMENT OF BIOLOGY of Southwestern College is maintained in order that the rich thought-content of the subject may effectively be made the possession of all who may feel an interest in the study of living things or in man's relation to the universe. Further than this, the methods of study that are employed are such as to give training to mind and hand at the same time. The value of such work lies in the fact that it helps one to bring about a proper relation between thinking and doing.

Some outstanding and inspiring examples of valuable thought-content are the principles of order, relationship, and development with which the student becomes impressed.

The study of Human Physiology, Hygiene, Sanitation, Heredity, and Eugenics has, of recent years, given most valuable help to the social and religious worker who may thus apply the discoveries and methods of the scientist to the problems of society.

These more specialized courses, however, along with others in Botany, Zoology, and Microscopic Technique are introduced to the student through a course in General Biology, the latter acquainting him with the fundamental principles of this branch of science.

SINCE the curriculum of the small college is unavoidably limited, highly specialized courses are necessarily barred. It has therefore been the aim of this department to offer three groups of courses that will fulfill the general requirements of the average student.

"GENERAL HISTORY" affords a broad, historical setting for our modern, national states. Since this is the only course that most students are able to take, its object has been a breadth of treatment rather than a specialization.

"SPECIAL HISTORIES" offers specific training for majors and minors, but a rather limited number of students evince a special aptitude for interest in this group. The endeavor is to prepare the student for high school positions or for graduate work in history, preparing him in the particular historical development of England, America, and Modern Europe.

"FUNDAMENTALS OF POLITICAL SCIENCE" presents basic courses in political science for majors. This course gives to the capable and persistent few a training that enriches the teaching of history, and prepares for advanced study in political and social sciences. Naturally, intercollegiate debating is in the care of this department.

THE DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS in Southwestern offers courses that are arranged to meet the needs of three classes of students. Those who are preparing to teach in secondary schools, those preparing for advanced work in a technical or a graduate school, and those who are taking work for its general cultural value will find work in Mathematics particularly suited to their needs.

A constant aim of the department is to show the relation and application of Mathematics to other branches of learning. Accuracy in the use of language, logical processes of reasoning, mechanical principles, the application of Mathematics to science, and its general utility are ever kept prominently in view.

A short course in Astronomy is also offered in connection with the general Mathematics courses, being open to all students of the college.

THE value of the modern languages as a branch of study is no longer questioned; to know at least one language other than one's own is a recognized part of a liberal education. Goethe states it thus, "Wer fremde Sprachen nicht kennt, weisz nichts von seiner Eigenen." The ability to read French or German is aboslutely indispensable to a scholar in these days who would pursue his subject beyond its elements, whatever may be his department of study.

Realizing this fact, the DEPARTMENT OF GERMAN of Southwestern College aims to develop in the student the ability to read German rapidly and intelligently, so that he may enter into the vast field of German literature pertaining to his favorite subject of study. It aims also to arouse in the student an appreciation of the magnitude and value of the literature of Germany by historic study and by the careful reading of a few selected pieces of recent or contemporary literature.

Throughout, however, the methods are modern, and the effort is to correlate the work of the department with that of other departments and with present day life.

AS in many other colleges, the DEPARTMENTS OF EDUCATION AND PHILOSOPHY are combined under one head.

Two aims are predominant in the Department of Education; in the first place the prospective teacher is given an opportunity of becoming acquainted with current educational theory and discussion, and in the second place an attempt is made, through the study of the organization of school systems and the technique of class instruction, to develop within him a professional attitude toward his work.

A course in Philosophy ought to be the capstone of a college course. After studying in a more or less isolated way in the various departments, the student needs to organize his work in larger outline and see the significance of the facts he has gained in the light of ultimate things. A study of the master thoughts and the master thinkers of history should leave the student stimulated, broad-minded and humbled; essential attitudes of an educated man.

THE ENGLISH DEPARTMENT of Southwestern College offers to the student a four-year course above that of the average high school. Work is offered in English Composition, History of Literature, Literary Criticism, Poetic Appreciation, etc., all of which are essential to the well-rounded and well-read man or woman.

All through the history of Southwestern College the English Department has been able to see at least a part of the results of its efforts through the instrumentality of debate and oratory, The Collegian, and the MOUNDBUILDER itself.

Instruction which prepares for such practical work is not limited to the class room alone, but is gained also in such organizations as the English Club which is a live wire among the several student activities and which is a direct outgrowth of this department.

THE DEPARTMENT OF VOICE in the Southwestern School of Music is open to all students of the institution, thus making it possible for any one to take advantage of at least a part of the courses.

Professional training in vocal music is not the sole aim of this department, although this advanced class of instruction is offered to those who desire it. Far more important is the purpose of training the student so that he may be not only appreciative, but also judicious in the use of music in the church and social circles.

Under this department comes also the directing of the College Glee Clubs and Choruses besides the general supervision of the musical interests of the college.

EVERETT K. FOSTER

ALONG with the rapidly growing recognition of the value of the study of music as a part of a liberal education advances also the popularity of the violin. The study of this instrument becomes valuable through its vital importance in the modern orchestra and through its unmeasurable assistance to the community which is trying to provide for itself wholesome and inspiring forms of recreation and amusement.

One particular aim of the work in this department is to enable the pupil to appreciate and interpret the better class of instrumental music.

Under this department falls also the direction of the instrumental organizations of the college.

THE presence of a piano in almost every average American home makes the need of piano instruction universal. Since the requirements for piano teachers are constantly being raised, it is best that instruction be gained in music schools of definite standard. Southwestern, through her piano department, offers not only to her students but also to her constituency an opportunity to secure standarized piano instruction, either in connection with a college course or independently.

GERTRUDE LYNN

Graduate of Kansas Manual Training Normal, 1907; Diploma in Home Economics, 1913, Columbia University.

THE outstanding aim of the SCHOOL OF ORATORY is to develop in the student his powers of expression. The fact that true work in expression must necessarily be associated with a complete discovery of one's self adds greatly to the general value of courses offered in the school. Repression, which is one of the greatest hindrances in all education, is removed through expression, giving the student a freedom of life and mind.

THE DEPARTMENT OF HOME ECONOMICS which was established in 1913 has made substantial growth during the two years of its existence, and the outlook for the future is as encouraging as has been the development of the past.

There is a growing appreciation in the modern college of the importance and necessity of offering opportunity for training in the art of home-making, the real business in life of the great majority of women. The desirability of standardizing woman's work so that her efficiency may be increased and her time and effort used economically, is no longer questioned.

It is the aim of this department not only to improve home-making through a study of its problems, but also to give a general knowledge of the subject matter as a basis for application in the general sciences, thus making it a part of a liberal education.

ARTHUR L. STICKEL

A. B., 1881, and A. M., 1900, Illinois Wesleyan University.

ONE of the vital problems of the college to-day and one that is almost invariably discussed at meetings of college authorities, is whether or not the good points of college athletics overbalance or even balance the bad points. This is not an unreasonable question since it is a common weakness of the physical director or coach in the small college, in order to draw attention to his own ability or prove himself worthy of a larger salary, that he sacrifice the physical education of the majority of the students to the building up of a winning football or track team.

It has been the policy of the PHYSICAL TRAINING DEPARTMENT in Southwestern to build up a championship team in every sport, not at the expense of the large majority of students, but with every one taking a part in a clean, helpful and healthful way. It will be the joy of this department when, in two or three more years, Southwestern will have the best equipped college gymnasium in the state. Then will it be possible in a larger way for every student to build up the physical side of his nature in proper proportion to the intellectual, and then will the Southwestern Spirit (as far as is concerned in physical training) be on a par with the Scholastic Spirit, Society Spirit, or Christian Spirit, each of which has gained wonderful proportions in our college.

INSTEAD of scattering its efforts over a large number of high-sounding courses, the SOUTHWESTERN ACADEMY under the principalship of Professor Stickel aims to concentrate upon a comparatively few but highly important educative and practical subjects, and to do the work thoroughly. Professor Stickel has the valuable assistance of several from the college faculty in accomplishing this aim; so with a definite purpose in view, a corps of competent teachers, and a genuine, healthy, religious atmosphere, conducive to clean living and clear thinking, this department becomes a live wire in Southwestern.

The Academy is designed to meet the needs of three classes of students: Firstly, young people of rather mature years who have not had the advantage of a high-school course; secondly, those who, coming from small high-schools, cannot meet the college entrance requirements in full; thirdly, those seeking a secondary school where instruction of a high grade is given under distinctly Christian influences.

EVERY department of a business education is represented in the curriculum of the SCHOOL OF BUSINESS of Southwestern College. Rooms and equipment especially fitted for its work are conducive to a thoroughness in training that will rival that of any other school of its kind. The school is designed to equip its students with an honesty, a self-reliance and a conscientiousness as well as with skill and accuracy in thought and action.

The mere business college lacks the advantages of a close connection with a literary or scientific institution which can be had in the Southwestern School of Business. Students in the school are not only permitted but even urged to take an active part in the different activities and organizations of the college. To them are opened the college library, the religious organizations, literary societies, athletics, public lectures, and musical opportunities, the importance of which, in respect to their bearing upon a general education, cannot be overestimated; they make up a great part of the percentage of advantage over the ordinary business course alone.

THE Student Council, which was organized in 1911, has filled a long felt need in Southwestern, the explanation of which may be found in the article of its constitution which describes the purpose of the organization. It reads as follows: "The object of the Student Council shall be to have advisory relationship to the faculty with respect to all student enterprises, organizations, and activities; to act as a board of arbitration between students and organizations of students; and to take the initiative in such matters as the Council may deem necessary." The Student Council has handled important questions concerning athletics, social affairs, class work, debate and oratory, student conduct, and almost every phase of college activity with great efficiency and with the most satisfactory results, thus furnishing to the student body an excellent system of self government, and at the same time acting as a "connecting link" between student body and faculty.

The personnel of the Council is thoroughly representative of the institution, consisting of two members from each of the four college classes, one member from each of the four academy classes, and one from each of the departments of Music, Oratory, and Business; the presiding officer at present is Prof. John F. Phillips, chairman of the faculty committee on administration.

This year the Council has recommended that one general athletic manager for all sports be appointed. Also it has appointed a committee to draw up rules that will regulate society rushing, society social functions, etc. Under the supervision of the Council has also come the settlement of questions regarding student conduct in class work and in community. Thus the Student Council, working in harmony with the student body and in conjunction with the faculty, is creating a common level of symapthy between the two, and is making possible a bigger and better Southwestern.

Championship Basketball Year

SOUTHWESTERN COLLEGE, prejudiced, or at least influenced by former experience, rather doubted the quality of her women's basketball team last fall. However, the coach had an "athletic eye," and after a practice game against the O. I. T. team of Tonkawa in which the Moundbuilders lost by seven points, Bates found that in spite of the defeat he had a team in whose veins ran the blood of champions.

The first game of the conference was played against the fast Cooper team from Sterling, and many basketball enthusiasts went to the scene of the conflict with a feeling that fate was indeed against them, so customary had defeat become. These feelings began to waver, however, when at the end of the first half, the Moundbuilders had held their opponents down to a lead of but three points, the score being 11 to 8 in favor of Cooper. By the time the game was finished the wavering feelings had entirely disappeared, for the women of Southwestern had won the game by three points, the score standing 19 to 12.

Encouraged and made confident by this victory, the Moundbuilders bent their energies toward the almost impossible and unthinkable defeat of the Fairmount women. Candy was immediately tabooed, Jennie Jinks was summoned to frighten away the mumps as well as to hoodoo the hordes from the north, and finally the best basketball team of young women Southwestern ever supported ran out onto the court to win a State Championship. A big crowd and Jennie Jinks were present to lend every possible aid to the determined Moundbuilders, and through the instrumentality of this happy combination the fates were at last overpowered. The first half of the game ended with the score tied, 7 to 7; and then it was that the real fight began. Fairmount and Southwestern took turns in holding the leading score until toward the end of the half, when the latter jumped ahead with a lead of five points. Three of these were erased by a free throw and a field goal to Fairmount's credit before the time keeper's gun was fired, but the women of Southwestern were still in the lead, and the Championship had been won, the latter holding the big end of the 15 to 13 score.

Championship

You have heard of the famous college,
For Southwestern is her name;
You have heard how she met her opponents,
And how she won the game.
You have heard of her debate squad,
Made up of fellows fine,
Who always claimed the decisions
Of the judges every time.
Here you must stop to consider;
Championships she does possess
Are the result of toil and training,
Which alone can bring success.

And now, since she is the champion,
What may she not attain
In football, baseball, and tennis,
In debate and the basketball game?
She will not slacken her striving,
But remain with the championship host;
And soon you will hear such praises sung
That will echo from coast to coast.
To Southwestern, our dear Alma Mater,
And to her purple royal,
Let us drink with cheer, and ever be
Her followers most loyal.

CLASSES

SENIOR

GARDNER—"Oh, he's papa's boy, all right."

As Seniors See It

DURING the brief moment of hesitation upon the dividing line between two eras, each member of the Senior Class looks back over his varied experiences of the recent past, and reviews with a feeling that is kin to homesickness, the disappointments and the pleasures, the rivalries and the friendships, the lost hopes and the ambitions, the failures and the successes that have crossed his path through the halls of Southwestern. This feeling cannot but change to one of uncertainty and helplessness when the vision is compelled to dismiss the past and to face the larger future. However, the future is filled with hope and opportunity, and with this thought in mind, the Senior buckles his belt a little tighter, hitches his wagon to a star that is a little higher, and presses forward with the same determined will that has accompanied him through four years of college struggles.

The mark that is left upon the 1915 page of Southwestern history will be distinct throughout the ages that are to come and go. From the ranks of the Seniors Inez Coldwell, Cora Gault, and Viola Strait will go to take advatage of scholarships, and will add their "mite" to the broadening reputation of Southwestern. Jennie Walker and Ruth Hoath will lend the aid of their strength and talent to the working out of mighty principles in the Foreign Field. Gray, of Chemistry fame; Gibson, the medicine man; Gardner, the debater; and Hodges, the sprinter are likewise enlisted in that army of forceful characters who act and accomplish. Within these ranks are, as usual, those who are married, those who are almost, and those who are still condemned to lives of single blessedness, but in spite of such differences, congeniality has ever reigned with a kindly hand.

As it comes now to the time of parting, each Senior takes one long, last, reminiscent look at each spot that has been endeared by associations, and though he turns with reluctance from the scene, yet he experiences new courage and new strength from the lasting benediction which Southwestern bestows upon his future life.

From the Angle of a Junior

THREE years at the grindstone in Southwestern College have indeed fulfilled their mission; at least, as far as concerns the Junior Class. They have proved to be a severe test, but instead of leaving the untiring Junior a three-fold wreck by the wayside of progress, they have fitted him to launch a life of influence into a world of facts. The change from Freshman to Junior has been gradual but certain; powers that once were used in a reckless fashion to accomplish things of insignificant value have been directed toward the field of usefulness, and the Junior has won his way into every popular phase of college life.

Zeigler and Carlson on the gridiron, Zeigler, Newman, and Robieson on the basketball court, and the same four plus Shade on the track have accomplished feats of strength and skill that have brought Southwestern to her feet with a loyal Hip! Hip! of admiration. Williams, White, Baker, and Hickman have almost monopolized positions on the college debate teams this year, leaving only two positions vacant, one to be filled by a senior, and the other by a freshman. Howard White has been satisfied with nothing less than two "firsts" in oratory; one in Old Line, the other in Peace. Hickman captured first place in Prohibition in the early spring. Lucile Lynch has proved worthy of an enviable position on the Ladies' Trio which will be in the field this summer. Newman and Fleming are known over the entire Southwest Kansas Conference for their excellent work on the quartet.

Three members of The Southwestern Entertainers and five of the Glee Club are representatives of the Juniors. Both editors and business managers of the Collegian and the MOUNDBUILDER are Juniors as well as the retiring and the succeeding presidents of the Y. M. C. A., and the new president of the Y. W. C. A. The Juniors number among their members also four student pastors, two Gospel Team men, two society presidents, one assistant in Mathematics, two assistants in Chemistry, the College Librarian, and the treasurer of the Student Enterprise Fund of the college. The biggest class social event of the year, known as the Junior Prom, is held by this class, and is looked forward to even by some students who are outside the "family." The climax of dramatic successes also goes to the credit of the Juniors for the way in which they, as a class, rendered The Climbers in the spring.

Any comments on the above statements could serve only to detract from the effects of the latter upon the reader, so we just conclude with the simple expression, 'nuff sed.

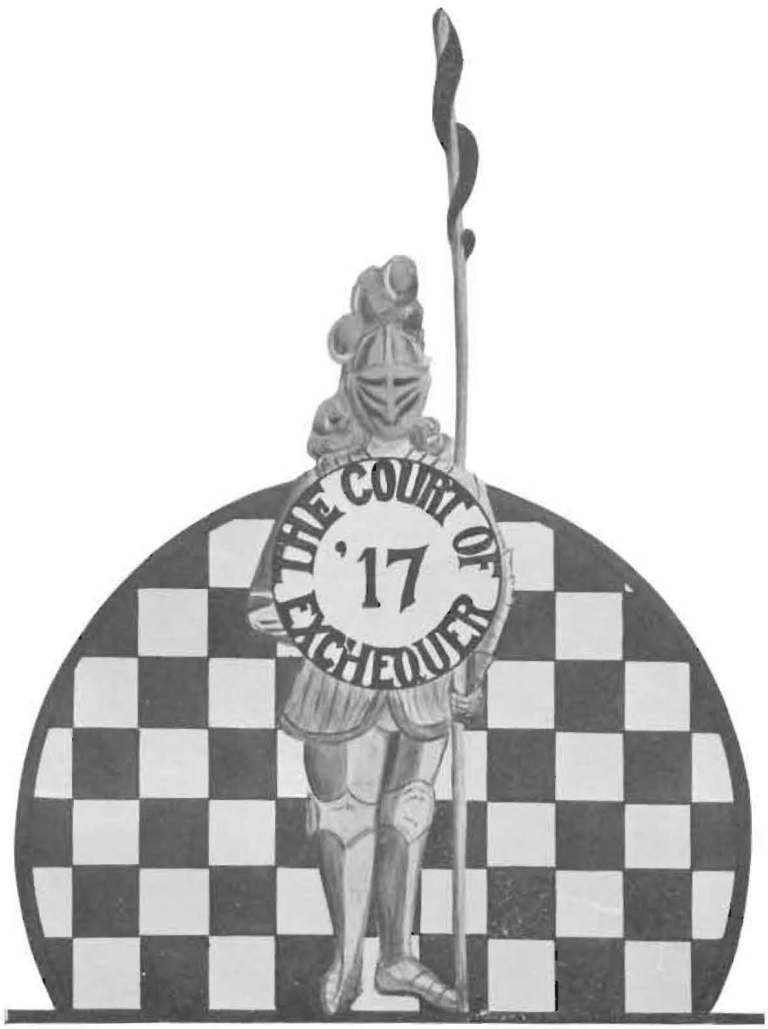
FRESHMAN—"What becomes of all the common pins, they're all pointed one way and headed another?"



REID—"My course? Oh, I'm taking a course in English."

The Court of the Exchequer

WITHOUT doubt, the Class of '17 has been the most cosmopolitan class in Southwestern. In her comparatively short history she has numbered among her members not only students from the occident, but also those from different countries of the orient. An organization of such a character cannot help being sympathetic and progressive in the broadest sense, nor can it keep from having and displaying those qualities that demand the attention and the respect of an environment which, like itself, is living and laboring with a definite purpose in view. Hence, '17ers are found in nearly every purposive activity of the college, each pursuing his own definite course, yet all united in one mighty effort to lift the already towering standard of Southwestern one notch higher.

Robinson, as captain of the football team for 1915; Rutledge, as manager of the team; Blackwelder, as captain of the basketball team; and Dudey, as manager of the baseball team represent, along with White and Warren, the Class of '17 in the realm of athletics. Harris, as business manager of the Glee Club, heads a list of five men who represent the class in that organization. Rutledge is filling a position on the College Quartet, and Ross has been appointed as Publicity Agent for the college. Seven men from the class were on the Y. M. C. A. Gospel Teams during the vacation. Avis Dungan placed on the Woman's Debate Team last winter, and Fee and Ross placed as alternates on the Men's Debate Teams.

The '17ers, however, have not been satisfied with individual efforts alone. Their crowning achievement this year has been the formulation and perfection of the class organization known as the Court of the Exchequer. This form of government is modeled after that of Henry VII. of England, having officers named after those of the mediaeval court, comparative duties, etc. The innovation was praised and commended by the president, faculty, and Student Council, the latter having recommended similar organizations to the remaining classes of the institution.

ARTHUR NOBLE

DIED DECEMBER 26, 1914

TO THE MEMORY OF ARTHUR NOBLE, A FRIEND AND BROTHER OF SPLENDID CHRISTIAN CHARACTER, WHO ENDEARED HIMSELF TO EVERY SOUTHWESTERNER, WE DEDICATE THIS PAGE.

THE FRESHMAN CLASS.

Those Freshmen

FRESHMEN are young (for the most part), inexperienced, and uncultured. The following, however, will show that they are also alive, talented, and ambitious; realizing that there is a place in the world for them, and expecting to prepare themselves to competently fill that place.

The Freshmen first made themselves prominent in Southwestern by the way in which they handled the Sophs. on the eventful day of the Class Scrap. The courage and valor that was displayed at that time merely foreshadowed a brilliant future, a part of which has been fully realized. Think of it! Members of the '18ers won the three highest places in the Women's Debate Tryout last winter. A plurality on the Girls' Basketball Team is made up of Freshmen, and the local Girls' Tennis Championship was carried off by them. Dorothy Cate has been elected treasurer of the Y. W. C. A. But hold! There are some men also in the Class of '18. Hantla won a place on the college debate team, Throckmorton was elected secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Whitt, Newby, and Williams are three of the five members of the Southwestern Entertainers Quintet, Swarner and Bridgman were elected by the Rooter's Club as cheer leaders of the college. Five Freshmen have "made" the Glee Club, three more come with scholarships from their respective high schools, and still others come with orating and debating records behind them that are bound to push '18 to the front.

Freshmen, then, are workers. Prudently and thoughtfully they are preparing themselves for successful futures. Each of them has a noble purpose, a steady faith, and a never faltering, iron will. These qualities in themselves mean success.

Southwestern Academy

WE usually confine our praise to those individuals or groups who do the extraordinary; those who exceed our expectations. Hence, we are prone to overlook the man who has been our next door neighbor for years and who, through all those years, has been making the world move in his quiet, unsensational manner. With a feeling of admiration and Southwestern loyalty we sound our praise in behalf of the college athletes, orators, and debaters, the musical organizations and religious workers. This praise has without doubt been merited and we would not recall a single phrase or pulse beat of it, but have we not been overlooking our neighbor, the Academy, who has lived for years at our side, making things move in its quiet, unsensational manner?

The Southwestern Academy is indeed deserving of praise; she has sent into the college some of the strongest and most successful students that the latter has known. Members of Academy graduating classes are at present doing a scholarship grade of work in the college; they are on the college debate teams, three of this year's squad being former Academy students; they lead out this season in college oratory, a former Academy man having won first places in Old Line and Peace; they stand out prominently in college athletics, seven of the football team and four of the basketball team having been Academy students.

There is a reason for this quality of work on the part of the Academy. That department of the institution has its own literary societies, conducted in its own society halls and by its own members; it has its own members in the Student Council and in the Christian organizations; it has its own class athletic contests, each under the supervision of the college Coach; and in the spring it holds the biggest, noisest, "wide-openest" track meet in Southwest Kansas. These are a few of the things which account for the wide-awake spirit and earnestness of the Academy, and for the preparation of intelligent and capable students for the college.

ZEIGLER—"I guess I'll go to Conference at Dodge City this year, and get me a license."

Fourth Academy

PERHAPS the chief characteristic of this year's Fourth Academy Class is its scarcity of the fair sex. In such a case it is essential that an organization of this kind console itself with quality alone rather than quality and quantity together, and in this class that is easily possible. The girls of the class have fulfilled the requirements of responsible offices in Sun Areta and bear themselves as loyal supporters of their brother societies, Webster and Ionia.

More can be said of the men of the class for there are more of them. The Academy basketball championship has for two successive years been claimed by this class, and as a result the loving cup, which was to be awarded the victors, has become their permanent property. Last year's Academy team was captained and managed by Little and Cummings who carried the men through a successful year. Aside from track work and other forms of athelties, the Fourth Ac's. are well represented in Christian activities, furnishing double their share of young men to the group of ministers who are preparing themselves for more efficient service to mankind. These representatives are Greenler, Cardiff, Cecil, and Dennison, and they promise big things for the Academy Class of '15.

Third Academy

LACK of numbers has not prevented the presence of the Third Academy Class from being felt in Southwestern. Members of the class have represented her in every prominent activity of the Academy, which fact makes her indeed a "progressive."

Peniwell has won honor in the position of quarter back on the second football team of the college, and also in that of captain of the Academy team for 1915. Academy basketball claims Peniwell also as captain of the boys' team and Evelyn Welsh as captain of the girls'. Tennis claims Anderson, Durr, and Crow from the 16ers, as well as Evelyn Welsh who contested the college women in behalf of the Academy. Manzano, Anderson, Griffith, and Sawyer have well represented the class in track work and have made worthy records. From the membership of the class have also been chosen the leaders of the three Academy societies, Anderson and Griffith having held the presidency of Ionia during the past two semesters, Hartman that of Webster during the last, and Pearl Englehardt that of Sun Areta last year. Positions on the debate team look promising to the Third Ac.'s and they are entering the realm of argument with their usual win-or-die spirit.

THE Southwestern School of Business is entrenched behind twenty-nine years of trustworthy record. It is distinctively a business school with superior courses presented in modern and systematic methods. Its adherence to sound principles and high moral tone, with its adaptability to specialized instruction in courses as broad as business and commercialism, make it a firmly established and thoroughly progressive business school.

Professor T. A. Spence was elected principal of the school in 1912, and since his coming the departments have increased, not only in enrollment, but also in number, several of the popular and useful courses having been added to the curriculum through his efforts.

Graduates from the various departments are filling lucrative positions of trust throughout Kansas and other States, and the school has the reputation of being one of the best commercial colleges in the Great Southwest.

ATHENS

QUARTER CENTENNIAL

IN the latter part of the year 1889, the Athenian Literary Society was organized. Last year was celebrated the Quarter Centennial Anniversary of Anthenian activities. During this twenty-five years, the organization has grown from a charter membership of twelve to a total membership of six hundred men. Athens is not merely a group of men now enrolled in school, but Athens is the hundreds of men who have, since the founding of the Society imbibed the same ideals and fought the same struggles as those of the men of to-day.

ATHENIAN RESPONSIBILITY

The Anthenian ideal has never been to outdistance rivals in college activities, but it has been the desire to produce men whose qualities are characteristic of real college men. This is the ideal of to-day. The rostrum records, the athletic standing, the social life, and even the present active enrollment are merely incidental to the society. Athens is not temporary, Athens is permanent. Should Southwestern disappear to-morrow with all the student organizations, Athens would still live in the hearts of the hundreds of men who have upheld this responsibility.

MEMBERSHIP

During the last few years sixty-two per cent of the men eligible for society membership have joined Athens. This includes graduates from Southwestern Academy, high schools, and those who entered with advanced standing from other colleges. Of one hundred and seventy-five men from high schools who have joined societies during this time, two thirds have chosen Athens as their society home. Winfield High School has contributed to Athens more than seventy per cent of its alumni who have entered Southwestern. Seven of the eight graduates from Southwestern Academy in 1914 affiliated themselves with Athens. The present membership, consisting of sixty-seven men, includes fifty high school graduates.

WHO'S WHO IN ATHENS

In all professions and occupations Athens has contributed a large share of the leading men who have gone out from Southwestern. Among them are: John W. Wetzell, Professor of Oratory in Yale University; A. E. Hertzler, Professor of Gynecology in the University of Kansas; Chas. N. Gould, Geological Engineer in the State of Oklahoma; D. H. Switzer, Pastor of the M. E. Church at Wellington; E. T. Hackney, Chairman of the Kansas State Board of Administration; J. F. Phillips, Vice-President and Registrar of Southwestern College; C. A. Kitch, Pastor of the M. E. Church at Larned; O. B. Baldwin, Professor of Philosophy and Education in Southwestern; W. T. Ward, Pastor of the M. E. Church at Pratt; W. V. Burns, Superintendent of the Winfield District; R. L. Smith, Lecturer on the Chautauqua Platform and Assistant Pastor to Dr. Gunsaulus of Chicago; H. L. Gleckler, Pastor of the M. E. Church at McPherson; A. L. Snyder, Missionary in the Philippines; W. A. Wells, Principal of the Boys' School in Singapore, India; Guy Muchmore, Instructor in Oratory in Cornell University; Fred Clapp, Physical Director in Southwestern, 1909-14; Jesse R. Derby, Professor of English in Iowa State College; A. L. Crookham, Manager of the Oregon Manufacturers' Association; C. A. Fleming, Professor of English in Michigan Agricultural College.

GOLD MEDAL DEBATE

Athens has instituted in her curriculum of training a system of debate which has fully met the demands of the inexperienced. This system is known as the Athenian Gold Medal Debate Series. A member of the Society is appointed by the Speaker as Chairman of Debate, whose duty it is to arouse debate interest among the underclassmen. Through a system employing two preliminary series and a final debate, a process of elimination is effected, judges of the several debates grading the men individually rather than according to sides. The two low men in each contest are eliminated, the remaining two being admitted to the next higher preliminary, and so on up to the final debate. Medals are awarded by the Society to the two high men of the final debate; one of these is of gold and is presented to the man receiving first rank, while the other is of silver and is presented to the man receiving second rank. Athens has met with unmeasured success in this well organized system of debate training.

MILLER—"This is a deuce of a life. What's the use, anyway?"

ORATORY

The Athenian Literary Society has always given a great deal of attention to the development of oratorical ability among its members. The result of this has been that of the twenty-four men who have represented Southwestern in the State Old Line Oratorical Contest, eighteen have been members of Athens. In the spring of 1914 Athens won first and second places in the local contest, this year receiving second and third places. In the State Prohibition Association two of the four men who have represented Southwestern have been Athenians. Both of these men won first place in the State contests, one also winning the inter-state and receiving close second in the national contest, ranking first in thought and composition. Each spring there is held the annual Society Oratorical Contest, which is for the purpose of preparing contestants for the college tryout. Prizes are given to the winners of first and second places. The record of the Athenian Literary Society in oratory is one unequalled by any society in the State of Kansas.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Realizing that music has been receiving too little attention on the part of the Society, Athens has created another new Society Office, viz., that of the Chairman of Music. Music, both instrumental and vocal, has long been a special feature of the Society's work, but there was need for a more definite system, one in which a specialist should secure and prepare music numbers for the regular programs, and develop musical organizations among the members. By giving special attention to the one department and by planning far ahead, he is able to raise the standard of the musical work far above what it could otherwise be. The Athenian Concert Company of 1913-14, known as The Southwestern Entertainers, an instrumental and vocal quartet, set a new standard for musical organizations of the school. The Entertainers Quintet of this year, an instrumental and vocal company, has lived up to its name, employing many original features.

"The Power of Love," a masque written by Paul Stevick, with music by Edward Harper, was presented by Athens and Belles Lettres in 1914, and proved that Athens could lead with original compositions of high character. The Society frequently joins with Belles Lettres in the production of plays and dramatic selections, aside from what each society does separately.

By a careful organization of the departments of debate, oratory, and music, Athens has placed herself foremost among the societies of the school in regard to systematic organization.

Delphi's Achievements

DELPHI presents, without apology, its record of work accomplished. With a membership never exceeding fifty, it has been possible to do concentrated, efficient work, bringing its members to foremost positions in all school activities. That these places have been earned solely through merit is attested by the fact that at no time has Delphi possessed a numerical advantage in the school.

UNEQUALLED IN DEBATE

In debate Delphi stands without a peer. Since 1905, when Southwestern reorganized intercollegiate debate, there have been twenty-two debates. Of these eighteen were led by Delphians, or Delphi furnished four leaders out of every five. In men constituting the teams, the records show forty Delphians out of the total of sixty-four, or five debaters out of every eight. The record is still more favorable when only the last three years are considered. Fifteen of the eighteen men on the three squads present an unanswerable argument for the efficiency of Delphi's training.

WINS EVERY CONTEST IN ORATORY

Since 1911, when B. W. Folsom carried off first honors in the Old Line Contest, the first Delphian to accomplish that feat, Delphi has gotten the habit of winning. Since then ten men have represented S. C. in State contests, seven of whom have been Delphians. This year the climax was reached when all three local contests were won by Delphians; Old Line and Peace by Howard White, and Prohibition by Minor Hickman. Then when White was ruled out of the State Peace Contest, because he had entered the same oration in the Old Line State Contest, Everett Murray, another Delphian and winner of second place in the local Peace Contest, took his place.

HOW CAN THESE THINGS BE?

Delphi is able to accomplish these results because the Society is small and compact, unencumbered by those who join for social affairs or political pull. Delphi asks of every member hard, persistent work.

Training, as shown in victories won, is largely a result of the ideals which the leaders of one school generation impart to those who follow through close contact in the work of the society. Delphi could not boast of its preeminence to-day were it not for the Meyers, the Coldwells, the Grooms who, "departing leave behind them" indelible imprints in the ideals of their successors.

Training of a more tangible form is given to twenty-four underclassmen who are interested especially in debate. These are divided into teams of three, each coached by one of the men who has made the college squad. A series of preliminary debates are held, the three ranking highest in each constituting a team which enters the semi-finals. When these are finished, working by the same method, six men remain who, in a final debate, contest for the highest rankings. This whole series requires but seven nights, and thus a maximum of training is afforded to debaters without taking the time of those who are not interested in this activity. Intra-society oratory is also promoted by a contest which is held every year.

MUSICAL TALENT

Delphi offers to its members good opportunities for development in the field of music. Besides musical numbers rendered during every program, two musical programs are given each year, being rendered jointly with Sigma Pi Phi. Soon after the opening of school a program consisting of glee club, quartet, solo, and instrumental numbers is given. But the big musical event of the year is the operetta that is given in the spring, employing between forty and sixty voices. Last year "Bulbul" was given, and this year, "The Little Tycoon."

Y. M. BOARDER—"Give me Zeig's pie, he's trainin'."

The superiority of Delphian talent is shown in the personnel of the College Quartet. For the last six years every member, with one exception, has been of Delphi. The College Glee Club also has a majority of like society affiliation.

PROMINENT ELSEWHERE

It should be no advertisement for a literary society to point out that certain of its members are prominent in this or that school activity, wholly unrelated to literary work, unless the idea to be conveyed is that the placing of men in these positions was due to society influence. It is the ideal of Delphi, unfortunately not always closely adhered to, to confine society activity to purely literary and cultural endeavor. It is but just to note that this ideal is coming nearer and nearer realization in the life of the school. Without transgression, it should be pointed out that John Sherman, a Delphian, edited the Collegian last year, that Howard White has been one of its associate editors for two years, and that Harry Carlson is the associate editor of the MOUNDBUILDER.

Also, as indicative of the type of men in the Society, the only man in the last three years who has been given the K. U. Fellowship is Herbert Vaughn, '14, a Delphian. Furthermore, the only men among the four ranking highest in the class of '16 are Delphians.

SELF REALIZATION FOR EACH MEMBER

But Delphi's work is not restricted to preparing a few of its number for successful competition in school contests. Co-operation is just as important. Delphi exists primarily for the mutual benefits which its members receive. The main emphasis is placed on the persistent, week by week work which is done in the Society. Papers are prepared for the Society that are products of the deepest thought of college men. During the past year papers read in Delphi have been the subjects of lively comment by faculty and students, irrespective of society affiliations. Delphi has a reputation of giving thought-evoking programs. But programs are not restricted to papers alone. Mock faculty and other special programs and, in regular ones, original poems and stories, musical numbers, snappy parlimentary drills, farces, two-man debates (when the championship series is not on); this variety adds in making the programs not only helpful to the participants, but interesting to the many visitors who attend. The value of each program is greatly increased by the kindly, helpful criticism which every one who takes part receives. This corrects uncouth provincialisms, causes mannerisms to be discarded, and gives soon to every member that feeling of at-homeness and self control before an audience, which is so prime a requisite in the cultured man.

A SOCIAL TRAINING OFFERED

The Society offers the best place in school for men to know each other intimately. Upper classmen here are not set off on account of time spent in school, but working along with younger men, they have the opportunity of freely imparting to the younger men whatever experience has taught them.

But lest the men should become too self-sufficient, association with Delphi's sisters, the women of Sigma Pi Phi, is maintained by mutual visiting of programs, by joint participation in farces and musicales, by informally breaking in on business meetings, by delightful receptions and more formal banquets. These are occasions of many of the happiest times in college life. Tedious lessons and midnight cramming, society rushing and class scraps are forgotten in the pure merriment of college social life.

While this sketch may seem to some to be designed as a presentation of stock in trade or an exhibition of Delphian wares for the benefit of prospective freshmen, it is hoped rather that it will be taken merely as a brief statement of what Delphi is doing, in order that credit may be given where credit is due, and that those who run may read a story of what a group of men consider essential in college life.

Speeding doesn't cause auto accidents, it's stopping too suddenly that makes all the trouble.

Belles Lettres

"NO STEPS BACKWARD" has been the motto of Belles Lettres Literary Society through a quarter century of progress. She stands to-day, upholding her high standard of literary work, and helping the college woman to make of herself the ideal. She has ever stood for intellectual endeavor, for hard work, for honest competition, and for consistent co-operation; seeking to bring out the best there is in the college woman; to make of her a well rounded character, preparing her for the demands that an active and serviceable life will make upon her time and talents.

Belles Lettres has stood high in the realm of athletics, for she believes in the woman of physical strength and grace. Six out of the eight women receiving letters in basketball this year are members of Belles Lettres, one of these having been elected captain of next year's team.

Belles Lettres also believes in the woman of keen intellect, and out of her midst three women have been elected to the honor and to the benefits of the splendid returns of the K. U. Fellowship.

Aside from the afore named interests, Belles Lettres has also another; this is Christian Activities. In taking an active part in the Christian work of Southwestern she has wonderfully helped to lift the standard of our womanhood above the commonplace, setting it on a level that is seldom reached in any other of our colleges. Representatives of the Society fill the presidency, along with several responsible positions on the cabinet, of the Young Women's Christian Association.

In short, Belles Lettres stands for what is truest and best in physical, intellectual, social, and moral training. She believes in thoughtful, active, happy womanhood, with lots of hard work and plenty of good times. To-day she looks back on a quarter century of true progress full of great achievements and glorious victories; but she stands on the threshold of an even more brilliant future, for just beyond

Sigma Pi Phi

YEARS and years ago the court ladies of a Grecian princess met in a body to discuss topics of interest, and to exchange friendly gossip, much as is done at the present day. Their chief interest was in a subject that had been impressed upon their minds by their great High Priest. He had been telling them of the transmigration of the soul, and that even after hundreds of years of separation there might be the recognition of the souls of people who had met before. These ladies planned to meet after the world had passed through several centuries of time, agreeing upon a sign by which they would be able to recognize each other in the future existence. This sign consisted of three letters of their alphabet which signified to them, Friendship, Loyalty, and Learning. This sign, after many public rites and ceremonies, was emblazoned for all eternity upon the mind of the soul.

Now just what happened between that time and this is another and an unknown story, but ten years ago three wonderful personalities paused in the halls of our Southwestern. Each, looking from one to the other, smiled, for in bold relief, shining on the forehead of each, were the symbols upon which they had agreed so long before. Looking about, they saw others all of whom were made happy by the mutual recognition.

Ever since that remarkable occurence these ladies have been coming. Sometimes just one will appear, then whole numbers will come at once. During these years they have held for their standard that which is best in life, Friendship, Loyalty, and Learning. Sigma has been successful. This year her membership was more than doubled, and it is always onward that she looks, always to the betterment of womankind. Her spirit is one of helpfulness and fairness to all. In Christian life she strives for attainments of the highest and rarest variety, her members working actively in church, Sunday School, Epworth League, and in the Young Women's Christian Association.

In the fall, when the new Sigmas come to Southwestern, they are received with open arms by their sisters who do all in their power to keep away homesickness and the blues. The new girls are "frolicked," "breakfasted," taken boating, and given spreads, and then to Dear Old Delphi all pay their respects in the form of a reception. But social events are not all for which Sigma Pi Phi stands. She prizes scholarship and hard earned success, and her efforts have always been bent toward this end. She has displayed her talent in the Women's Oratorical Association, the Southwestern Trio, and the Junior Play. In musical talent she enjoys an enviable reputation. The annual operetta which is presented by the musical and dramatic clubs of Sigma and Delphi is always one of the biggest musical events of the school year.

O, Sigma Pi Phi, the girls of the "green and white" will ever love and honor thee. Thy name shall live forever in their hearts. They are proud of their collegiate Society whose standard is unexcelled. Help them to work first for their Faith, then for their College, and next for Thee.

Southwestern Oratory

OLD LINE

FOR twenty-four consecutive years Southwestern has had her representative in Old Line Oratory. Never has she failed to pass the elimination contest which has eliminated some of her sister schools as many as five consecutive times.

The contest held last year was very spirited, several contestants being entered. Guy Tetirick won first place with his oration, "The History of To-morrow," while Tien Lan Lin was a close second with a matchless oration, "When the West Meets East." Because of a weak throat and a bad cold, Tetirick fell to eighth place in the State Contest when, under ordinary circumstances, a much better place would undoubtedly have been his.

The contest this year was under the management of the new Board of Oratory Control. Only four contestants entered. However, White was winner with a scholarly oration entitled, "A State of Nations." Carl Newby, a freshman, was winner of second place. In the State Contest at Emporia White received fifth place in the judges' decision.

PROHIBITION

THE college Prohibition Association for the year of 1915 is probably the strongest in the history of the school. Fifty-two paid members are upon its records, and while outward manifestations of activity are few, nevertheless a real deep spirit of interest is in evidence.

Last year four contestants were entered in the local contest. Miss Edna Bement won first place with her oration, "The Cry of the Oppressed." Second place was won by Thos. Williams with an oration entitled, "The Impending Crisis." On account of Miss Bement's oration failing to pass the elimination contest, we were not represented in the State Contest for that year.

This year only two men entered the local contest, Minor E. Hickman, and Chas. J. Fee, who won first and second places respectively. The State Contest is to be held at Tabor College on April 9th, and we confidently expect Hickman's oration, "The need of the Hour," to be ranked in a place that is second to none.

PEACE

THIS is a comparatively new organization in Kansas, and is the result of a national movement launched by the advocates of International Peace to further promote their ideals among the American colleges.

Last year Carl Carlson was the winner of the local contest over several competitors, and represented Southwestern in the State Contest. Hard luck was Carlson's portion in this however, as he drew the bottom of the ladder in spite of a splendid production.

This year the local contest was held under the auspices of the Board of Oratory Control. A good contest was staged in which four participants entered. Howard White carried off the honors with the same oration he had entered in the Old Line Contest, "A State of Nations." Because of a rule of the National Peace Association which forbids the entering of any oration that has previously won first place in any other association contest, White was eliminated from the State Contest. Everett Murray, who had won second place, was accorded the honor of representing Southwestern at Topeka, which he did in a very creditable manner.

WOMEN'S ORATORY

THIS organization has enjoyed two very successful years in its very important field. The future of oratory for women is very promising, and the college has sought to encourage it as much as possible.

Last year Miss Edna Bement was the winner of the local contest, and in the State Contest she failed by only a very small fraction of a per cent to receive first place.

The local contest this year was won by Miss Olive Bray, Miss Harriette Geeslin taking second. We are looking forward to a celebration and the placing of another Victory Stone on Builders' Mound after the State Contest this year.

THE DEBATE OUTLOOK

THE year of 1915 opened upon one of the heaviest debate schedules in the history of Southwestern.

The First Preliminary Debate, held on December 8, 1914, was conceded by those in a position to know, as being one of the most gratifying in the annals of the school. Eighteen men entered, and for almost four hours the advantages and disadvantages of Federal Ownership and Operation of Interstate Railroads were proclaimed. The six men receiving the highest places were Williams, White, Baker, Gardner, Hickman, and Hantla, in the order named, with Fee and Ross as first and second alternates respectively.

The first debate on the schedule will be with Morningside College of Sioux City, Iowa, on April 9th. This school is President Mossman's Alma Mater and is ranked very high in Iowa inter-collegiate circles. The negative of the railroad question will be defended for Southwestern by Williams, Baker, and Gardner.

On May 8th, the College of Emporia meets us in a dual debate upon the same question. White, Hickman, and Hantla will uphold the affirmative at Winfield, while Williams, Baker, and Gardner will again defend the negative at Emporia.

On April 30th, the new triangular debate with Friends and Fairmount will be held. This contract introduces an innovation in the form of two-men teams. The affirmative of Federal Compulsory Arbitration of Labor Disputes will be upheld at Winfield against Friends by Williams and Gardner, while the negative will be defended at Fairmount by White and Baker.

The foregoing constitutes a very heavy debating schedule for the men, but as debate is more popular than ever before, and the men of the present are equal in every way to the giants of former days, we may safely predict that Victory will again adorn the MOUNDBUILDERS' reputation in the field of inter-collegiate debate.

WOMEN'S DEBATE

AS a result of continued agitation in recent years for an opportunity allowing the women of the school to enter debate, Southwestern finally acceded to the demand. It is needless to say that it was a long delayed step in the right direction, for the women of the school should be accorded a forensic privilege similar to that enjoyed by the men. The freshman class of '14 included some of the most skillful high school debaters among the women that have ever entered the college.

The First Preliminary Debate, held in February, was in every way a success. Using the same question that was used by the men, the Railroad question, ten young women discussed without fear or favor its merits and demerits to the genuine satisfaction of a large and appreciative audience. Misses Harlan, Bollinger, Alexander, Dungan, Lynch, and Croson won the first six places in the order given. The first three were members of the freshman class which fact clearly indicates that the future of Southwestern's debates for women will in no wise suffer from a slump.

Owing to miscarried plans, only one debate for women was secured. This will be with Phillips University, at Enid, Oklahoma, the negative of the question being defended by Misses Harlan and Alexander.

What's In a Name?

In the Shade of the tall old Pine
  Is a spot where sweet Williams grow;
And there, when the Hayes of twilight Falls,
  Is the place where my Hart loves to go.

In the soft Gray Light of the sunset time,
  Moore sweet than the song of the Beach,
Is the Musick of water that gently Falls
  On the Stone at the Glaser's feet.

The Miller sings though the Wolfe may howl,
  And Maucks with Yeoman's glee;
E'n the Kroeker can Waddle and Jump so well
  That never a Whitt cares he.

And loitering along the Woodward path,
  Where the Crick flows gay and free,
Is better than Bo(w)lin(g) along Strait streets,
  And paying Fashion's Fee.

By the spring's Coldwell and bonnie Brays,
  Where the White anemone springs,
Is a landscape lovier by far
  Than the Gardner's cunning brings.

On the lofty Hill above the Meade,
  Far off from the Holmes of Mann,
Wind, Nature's Harper, tunes his lay
  Since time and the world began.

Here the Scales of earth fall from my eyes
  And Burns my Hart with love
As I follow the path of truth and Light,
  At the Beck of the Master above.

Then let me stay where the love of God
  I can most plainly Reid,
Where the beauties formed by Nature's hand
  Are my Bishop and Pope and creed.

The Y. M. C. A.

THE work of the Y. M. C. A. is indescribable; in the college, as well as in the broad and busy world, it fills a place that cannot be told about in words, and the only way one can begin to comprehend its worth is to imagine, if possible, what conditions would exist had that organization never been begun.

In the first place the Y. M. C. A. takes a new student by the hand and makes him feel as if he had been away from home dozens of times before. Then it finds him a place to sleep (if this has not been attended to beforehand) and lastly takes him to a Stag Social where he is given half a watermelon and rendered immune to the attacks of homesickness. That is doing well for the first week but the real work of the Y. M. has only just begun. Soliciting of new members follows in the second and third weeks. New men are made to feel that not only do they need the organization, but the organization also needs them, and this mutual need builds up a sympathy that lasts longer than a college course.

The Y. M. C. A. fits itself to meet men; it does not force men to meet it. If a new student wants to work, a job is found for him; if he wants good literature, it can be found on the Y. M. reading table; if he wants social diversion, that can be found every six weeks in the Y. M. Stag Socials; if he wants to hear helpful, heart-to-heart talks on all phases of life problems, he has that chance every Wednesday morning in the weekly devotional meetings of the Y. M., where inspiring talks are given by prominent and successful business men from the standpoint of experience. In meeting men, the Y. M. C. A. must be able to fill their needs, and this it is striving to do.

The idea of progress does not permit anything to go backwards; hence next year will witness a more efficient Y. M. C. A. than has this year, and so will every succeeding year, each being better than the one immediately preceding. So here's to the best Young Men's Christian Association for next year that Southwestern has ever experienced.

MOTTO—"Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit," saith the Lord.

THE Young Women's Christian Association fills a large place in the social and spiritual lives of the women students of Southwestern. At the beginning of the school year the members meet new girls at the trains and help them to find rooms and boarding places. An informal reception for all the women students is given during the first week of school, and a joint reception with the Y. M. C. A. for the whole student body a little later. These social functions help everybody to get acquainted and help along the "big sister" attitude of the old members toward the new girls.

Every Wednesday morning during the regular chapel period are held the weekly meetings of the organization. These meetings are spiritual, practical, or informational in accordance with the need. The leaders are students, faculty members, or outside speakers. Mrs. Lucy Rider Myer of Chicago, Miss Maud Price of Wellington, and Mrs. Emma Turner of Oklahoma City are some of the strongest leaders who addressed the Y. W. during the last year.

In the development of spiritual excellence, leadership, and a world view of the present day needs of Christ's Kingdom, the Y. W. C. A. is a large factor.

The Student Volunteers

MOTTO—The Evangelization of the World in This Generation.

THE Student Volunteer movement had its birth in the versatile mind of D. L. Moody, and was launched by him in 1886. It is a movement among the men and women of the world, those of university caliber, for the dedication of themselves to missionary work in the foreign field. As to the practical results of the organization only this statement need be made, that during the twenty-nine years of its existence more than five thousand student volunteers have gone into some form of missionary work, equipped with a definite purpose. At present Dr. John R. Mott, the great missionary statesman, is the president of the organization.

There has been a band of Student Volunteers in Southwestern since 1901 which has counted among its members some of the best students and Christian workers in the history of the college. The Band meets once a week for the study of the various phases of missionary life and activity, and for mutual strengthening of faith and purpose.

Since the organization of the Band in Southwestern, more than twenty of its members, following out their purpose to go to the foreign field if God permits, have gone as foreign missionaries to India, Malaysia, or the Philipines.

The Y. M. C. A. Gospel Teams

ONE of the most influential movements of the Y. M. C. A. of Southwestern is that carried on through the instrumentality of its Gospel Teams. Every winter several men volunteer their services during the Christmas vacation and gladly go out into neighboring communities, bearing to them the story of the Christ as seen from the angle of the young man of to-day.

Two teams were sent out this year, one going to Hunnewell and the other to Castleton. The former team was composed of Stansbury (leader), Zeigler, Templin, Jackson, White, and Robinson; the latter was composed of Carlson (leader), Walter Baker, Martin, Ross, Fee, and Rutledge. The men began their work by giving a social evening in their respective communities for the purpose of breaking down all needless formalities, and of getting rid at the start of that spirit of strangeness which is so antagonistic to the class of work in which they were to engage. After this first introduction, the two teams held services every night, talking to large and interested crowds of people who were anxious to know what the Christian life could mean to young men of this type. Afternoon meetings were held for the especial benefit of the younger boys of the town. At these meetings talks were given and experiments were performed which were equipped with that type of interest peculiar only to boys. Hikes were also taken at different times, making it possible for these younger people to associate as much as they could with the true stamp of Christian Character which lasts all week, and which can add a deeper enjoyment to every phase of clean work or sport.

Members of the two teams were scattered out over their respective communities during the week, changing their "address" from place to place every two or three days and thus coming into close relations with a great number of people. This idea and its results undoubtedly had a great deal to do with making possible the remarkable degree of influence which these men had over the people with whom they lived and to whom they talked.

Perfect team work and hearts burdened for the welfare of the community speak for the success of the two teams. This success can never be measured in units of any sort, nor will the men ever be paid for their efforts in material recompense. However, the following letter which was received by one of the team men, and which is typical of many others that have been received since Christmas, speaks, in a small way, for both the success of the meetings and the reward of the men on the teams; it speaks from the warm heart of a serious minded girl who sees in her brother the pure, upright, and strengthening impression left there by these men of high ideals and of Christian purpose.

Dear Friends:

L——— received your card, and it seems to help him to know that someone cares enough to think of him and to pray for him to be a better boy. I realize that I have not been the sister to L——— that I should have been, but since you boys have caused me to make a new start I have tried to make up to brother what I had neglected before. He talks of you boys so much that I know he has been helped by the example you set before him.

It seems as though Hunnewell was just waiting for someone to come along and wake it up like you boys of the Gospel Team did. The girls have started a Bible class and meet every Wednesday night to read and study.

Every night I remember you boys in my prayers; I pray that the people who made a new start while you were here will continue in the way they have started. I hope they will get as much help out of taking every trouble to the Savior as I do. Although our home is not a Christian home, yet it seems brighter since the Spirit of God has begun to be master over a part of it. I want your prayers that I may always be faithful to my Master.

Your friend,

The Men's Conference

ON the evening of September 11, 1911, the men of Southwestern College met in the Y. M. C. A. building for the purpose of organizing the Men's Conference. The purpose of this organization was to promote the highest New Testament standard of living, and to prepare men for practical Christian service.

The Men's Conference is not merely a preachers' organization, but its doors are open to all those persons who are willing to take some active part in winning the world to Christ. Its meetings, which are held on three evenings of each week, last only thirty minutes and are held at an hour that is convenient to all. These meetings are for the most part conducted by members of the organization, following a system of rotation. Officers, which consist of a presiding officer, six cabinet men, secretary and critic, are elected monthly, with the exception of the cabinet men who are appointed by the president. The list of the membership is divided into six districts, one cabinet member being placed over each district. It is the duty of each cabinet member to visit the men on his list at least once during the month of his office, and to hold private devotions with them, inquiring especially into their religious conditions. Upon retiring from office he then reports the condition of his district. This phase of the work, when carried out successfully, has proved to be one of the most helpful works of the organization.

The Men's Conference is meeting a demand in the lives of Southwestern students which is not furnished in any other way and is coming to be recognized as one of the most vital factors in the development of the spiritual life of the instutution.

The Southwestern Chorus

THE Southwestern Chorus is organized each year for the distinctive purpose of offering to the students of all departments who can sing, an opportunity of ensemble singing, and of learning something of the form and intent of such works as cantatas and oratorios. Another purpose naturally results in getting the work of the department before the people of the community and in arousing a general interest in musical activities.

This year the Chorus spent the most of its efforts on the cantata, Joan of Arc, which was rendered in the spring before the general public. The splendid rendition spoke well of the department as well as of those who participated, and the marked enthusiasm accompanying the entire process of training promises an excellent organization of similar character for next year.

The Jinx Rescue Party

THE football rivalry between Southwestern and Fairmount was the occasion of much excitement during the first term of school. Fairmount came down from Wichita with a determination to make up for the two successive defeats which had been handed to her by Southwestern, and not only did she carry off the glory of the contest as per expectation but she also procured that symbol of Southwestern's athletic supremacy, the "Jinx."

Immediately many plans for the capture of the stolen property were organized, and on one Friday night a party consisting of Arthur Noble, Ralph Baker, Junior Robinson, Sterling Kanaga, and Harold Wakefield carried out one of these plans and succeeded in upholding the honor of the MOUNDBUILDERS.

A trip of exploration had previously been made for the purpose of finding out the condition of affairs, as well as the exact location of the stone, and at eleven o'clock on the night of November 13, 1914, the above party started on the memorable trip of the rescue.

The Fairmount College building was reached about one o'clock in the morning and without delay an entrance was effected through a basement window. The monstrous stone was discovered and again became the property of its rightful owners. It was hurried to the waiting automobile and the return trip to Winfield was made in an almost impossibly short time. On the following day the stone was set up in chapel, and great was the rejoicing when it was fully realized that the "cat had come back" to stay.

After unveiling the stone, Arthur Noble related the details of the event to an interested student body who, out of its heart felt sympathy for the bereaved Wheatshockers, sent the latter a message of condolence. The Rescue Party were the heroes of the hour, and their action will go down as a land mark in the history of Southwestern.

Because of such titles which have been applied, without second thought, to the Moundbuilder management by a prejudiced student body, we feel privileged to request the students to submit their exact opinion in regard to the matter.

We, the management, believe that we are not exceeding our bounds in requesting the most hearty support of the student body and in sounding the depths of this support, we submit the following, hoping that your signing it will insure us your hearty co-operation, which we must have in order to obtain any measure whatever of success.

My Creed

I believe that Southwestern ought to publish an annual at least once every two years.

I believe that the present Junior class is capable of putting out a book that is worthy of the name of Southwestern Moundbuilder and that is worthy of the support of the whole student body, and that the present staff are doing all in their power to represent Southwestern. Therefore, I believe that every student ought to stand back of the proposition, not as representing the Junior class, but as representing Southwestern College as a whole.

I believe that the making public of all financial accounts by the Student's Council will tend to make the financial demands of the management reasonable, and I believe the price of two and three dollars is a reasonable price for a two hundred seventy-five page book bound in cloth and leather.

I believe it is my duty to help the class and the staff in the publication of the book. I hereby willingly agree to subscribe for the number of copies of the Moundbuilder at $2 cloth and $3 leather indicated right below by the number, immediately following my name Albert J McCulloch 5. The management guarantees both bindings, but recommends leather bound copies.

Assured of this, I sign

And furthermore, in order to show my good graces, and to begin my Moundbuilder missionary work at home, I again affix my signature to the following.

I hereby authorize the management of the 1915 Moundbuilder to supply me with One cloth, ~~leather~~ bound copy of the book immediately upon its publication, for which I am to pay the customary price of $2 for cloth and $3 for leather binding.

The Southwestern Collegian

THE first Southwestern Collegian was published in 1901. Previous to this time, several papers had been published, but none as purely college newspapers. Among the first of these publications was The Round Table. This was followed by The College Advance, published primarily for advertising purposes. The College Bulletin was the last publication before the Collegian was established. The last number of this monthly magazine came out in February, 1901. During the next month The Southwestern Collegian made its initial appearance.

For two years the president of the college acted as editor-in-chief, but in 1902 the publishing board put all editorial work in the hands of the students. Until 1909 the Collegian, under this management, was published in magazine form. It contained college news, but more emphasis was placed on literary features.

With the adoption of the Collegian constitution in April, 1909, the magazine became a weekly college newspaper. During the last few years the Collegian has gone through various changes in size, date of publication, and minor details, but its standards have always remained high.

The Southwestern Collegian is published every Tuesday, a five-column, four-page newspaper for college students, realizing its aim: to picture the school life of Southwestern College; to go further than merely printing the news by standing for the ideals the institution holds; to play no favorites; to be clean; to be cheerful; to be charitable; to be courageous; to leave more serious problems to wiser heads; in all, to serve to the best of its ability the students of the college.

Baseball Championship 1914

THE State Athletic Committee which met at Winfield last spring awarded the Baseball Championship of the Kansas Conference for the 1914 season to Southwestern. Ten Conference games were played, eight of which were won, as opposed to seven won and two lost by Fairmount, the runner up. Both games which the Wheatshockers lost were won by Southwestern.

The baseball season opened with a game against the local St. Johns College, the latter winning the game, 14-6. The Chilocco Indians gave us the first out of town game, winning it by six points, the score being 8-2. The first Conference game was played against Kansas Wesleyan and was an easy victory for the Moundbuilders, the score being 13-3 with the long end at the right place. Burchfiel pitched for the Moundbuilders and allowed eleven hits, while his team mates were gathering sixteen off of Jones. The second game of the Conference was won from Ottawa, 9-3, when the Moundbuilders pounded Gunn off the rubber, getting six of their seven hits in one inning.

Southwestern began her series of out of town games at Fairmount, winning the game 8-7 by pounding Solter for thirteen hits. Burchfiel allowed the Wheatshockers only ten. Friends was an easy victim on the day following the Fairmount game, losing 9-3. Vandaveer held the Quakers to eight hits, the Moundbuilders in the meantime pounding out fifteen. Vandaveer practically won his own game by getting a home run, a three-base hit, a two-base hit, and a single out of five times at the bat. Ottawa won the first game from the Champions at Ottawa when she won a great pitcher's duel between Bernstorf and Gunn, each pitcher allowing but four hits. Ottawa scored her winning run on an error, and Randel's home drive counted the only tally for Southwestern. Baker found the Moundbuilders decidedly off form and won a weird contest to the tune of 5-2. But the Champs came back with a vengeance and played a wonderful game against St. Mary's the following day, winning it 1-0. In this game Bernstorf allowed the Catholics but two hits, one of which was a high fly that he and Timken let fall between them.

On returning from the baseball trip, the team again lost to St. Johns, Burchfiel being hit time and again, while Horstman seemed practically unhitable. At Winfield, Baker received a good drubbing at the hands of the Purple nine, the score being 10-1. The Moundbuilders pounded Stuckey hard in three innings while Bernstorf kept the Bakers' seven hits scattered through six innings. Friends, rather than play without the services of Salisbury (who was ineligible), forfeited their game, but lost in an exhibition game 8-0 when Burchfiel let them down with three hits. The second game with Fairmount followed that with Friends. This was the deciding game of the championship, and Southwestern won by pounding Solter for four hits and three runs in the first inning.

Manager Groom is one of the steadiest men in any of the Kansas Colleges, the best man on the team to make a pitcher work.

Captain Bernstorf is as good as any of the college men of the State, and our best yet.

Vandaveer developed very fast. Southwestern wants to keep Jim in college to help out next year.

Dudey developed faster than any other man. They say a duck is ready for market in six weeks, but Dudey beat the ducks.

Yeoman is a player like Manager Groom, and one of the few who can think for himself.

Burchfiel is a steady pitcher and fills in at second base like an old infielder.

Randels is fast in the outfield and is a good all around hustler. He is from Harper County.

Timken did all the catching, and that is saying a good deal for a young catcher. He is a nice receiver and his throwing will improve greatly.

Rutledge is the kind of a boy I like; he has the nerve and plenty of pepper, red or black—doesn't matter.

Hester will also be a better man in 1915, along with Blackwelder, Griffith, Evans, Cummings, and several more of the boys who helped a great deal, even though they didn't know it.

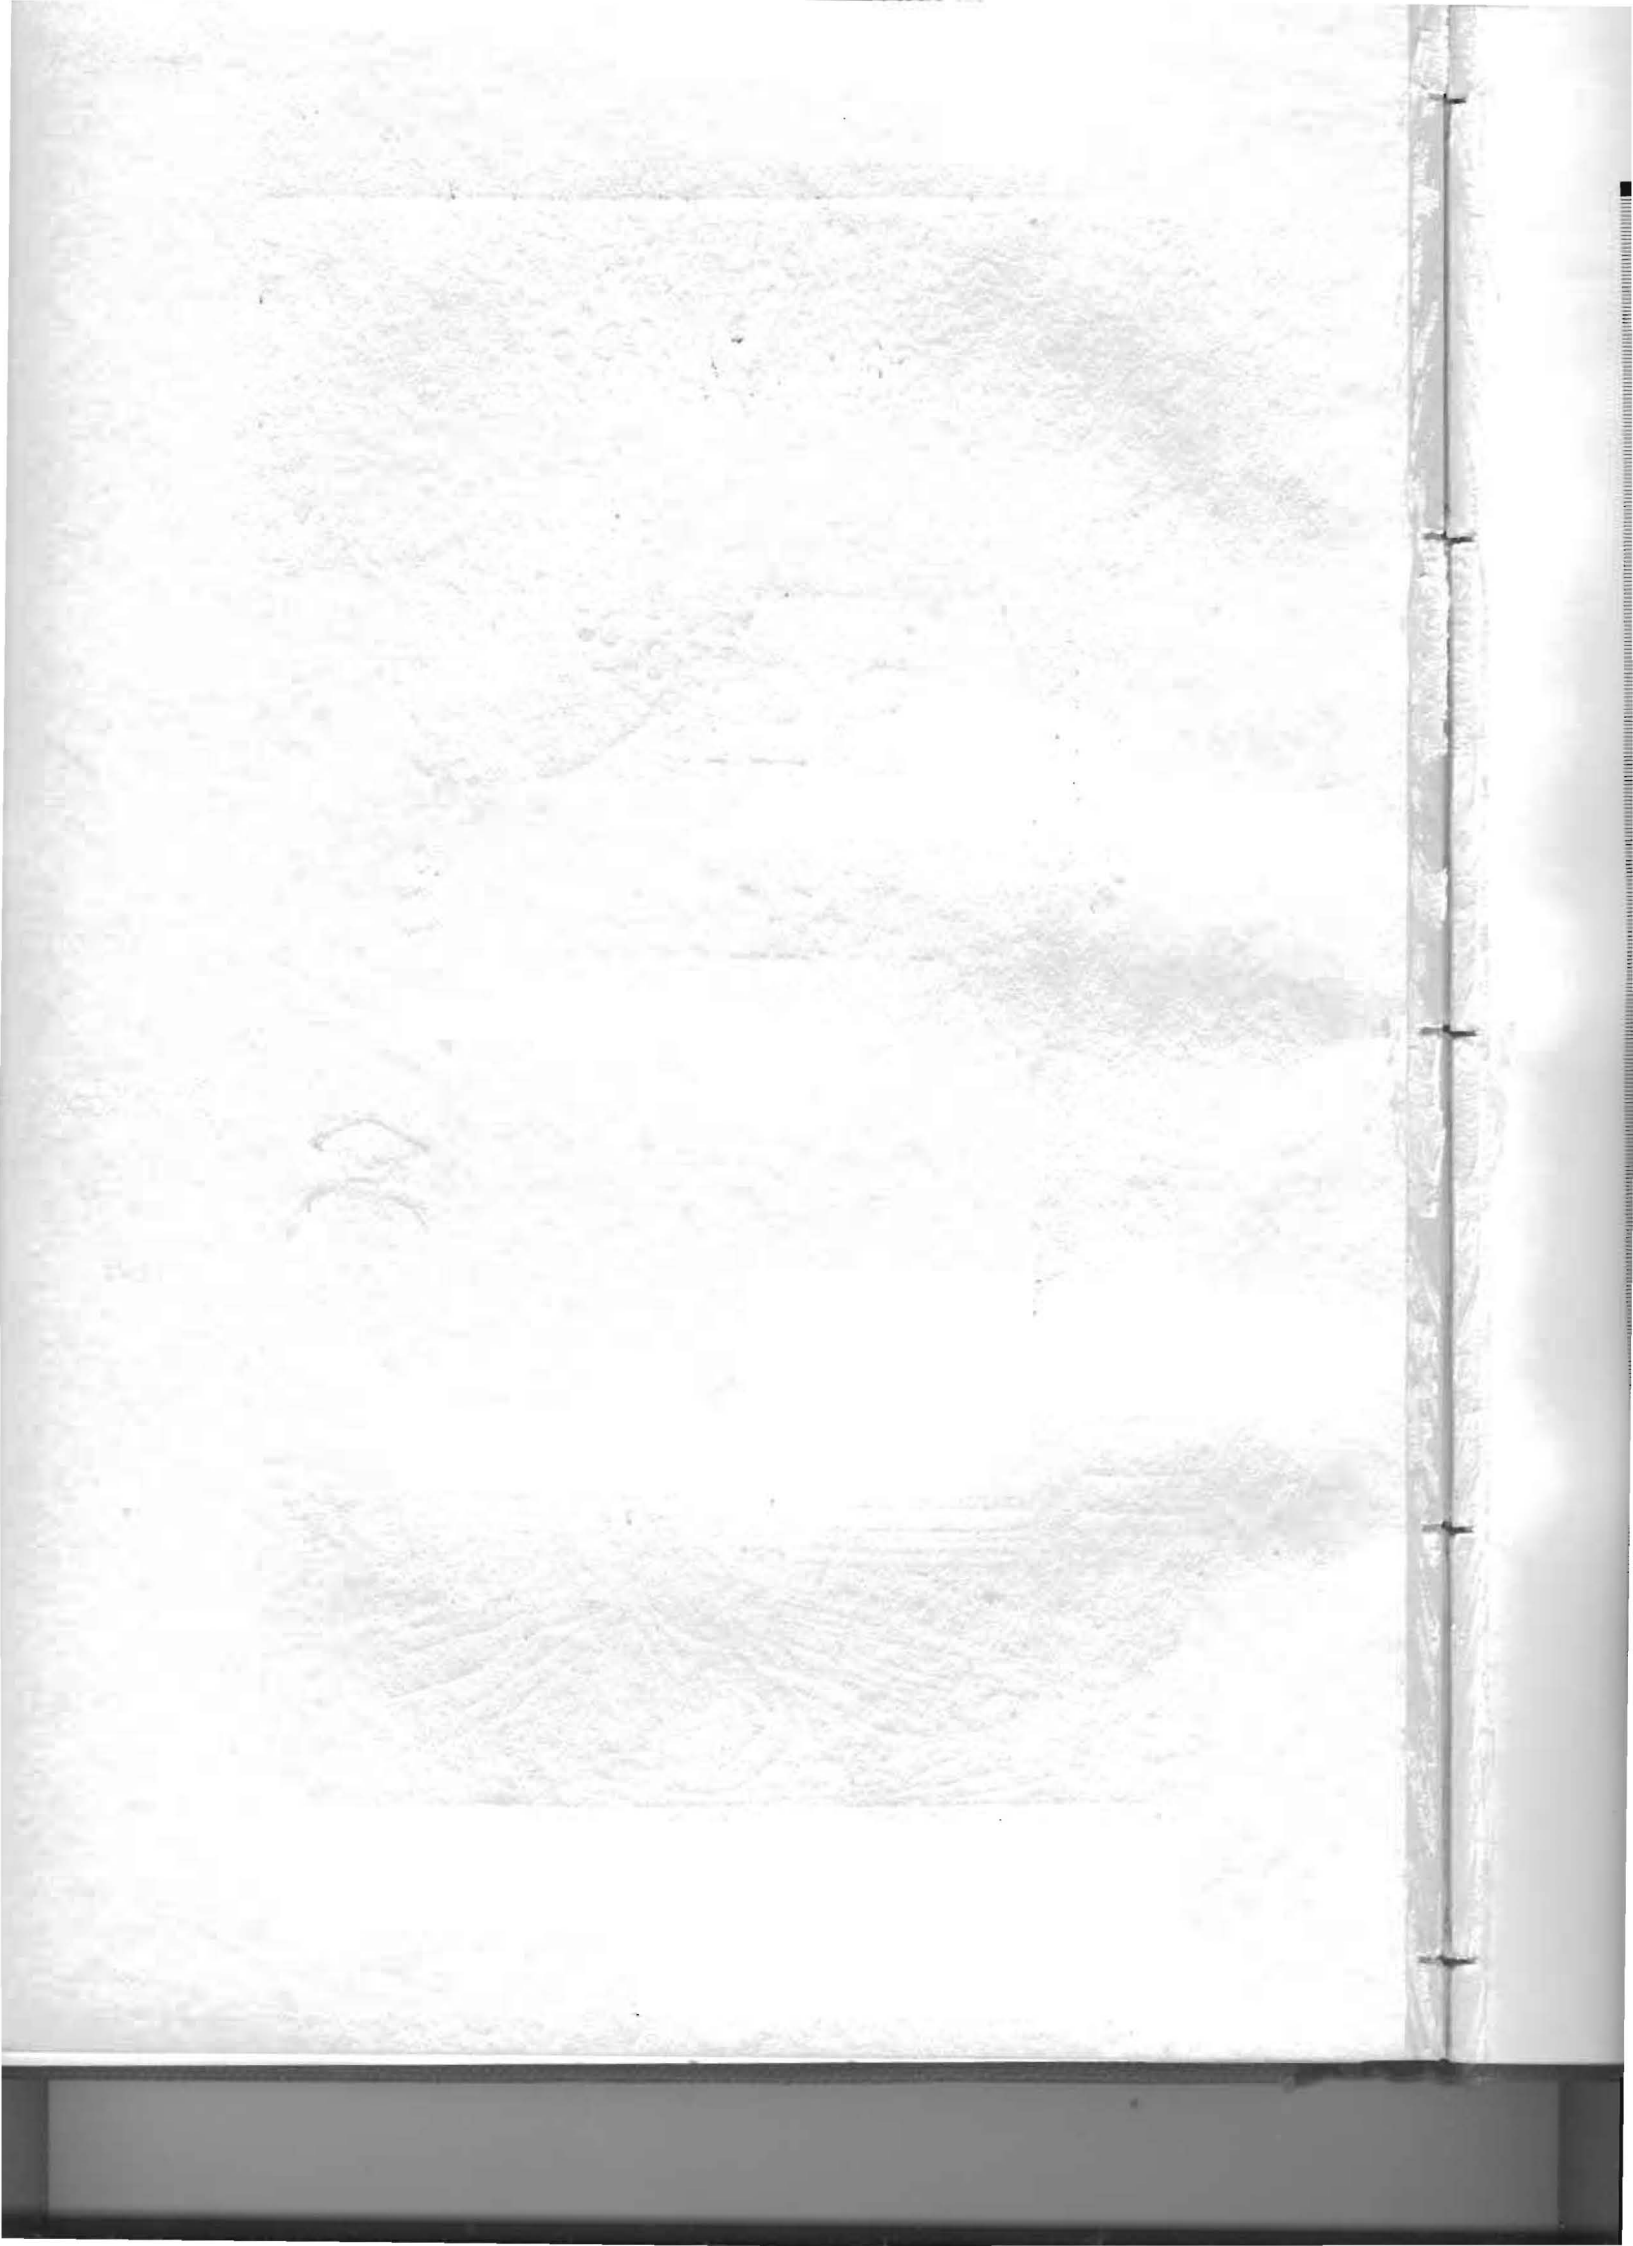
Athletics



The Why of Efficient Athletics

AMONG the colleges of the State, Southwestern holds an enviable position in the field of athletics. The efforts that have been made to attain this position have been along the avenues of clean, manly participation. Each man has felt it to be not only a duty, but also a strong desire to advance the standards of college sports. Hence, only good, clean athletics have resulted.

Not enough can be said in behalf of the men who have stood foremost in this gradual movement toward a higher and more equalizing standard. First there comes to our mind the name of Fred H. Clapp, who is now taking special training in the Y. M. College at Springfield, Mass. To him more than perhaps to any other man is credit due for the high rank which Southwestern holds in the athletic circles of the State. Under his leadership as coach, we have sent out teams that have at different times humbled all of our rivals. One of these teams was a championship basketball team, another was a championship football team, and still a third was a track team that swallowed the dust of none. These, however, are incidents; the principle back of the whole system is the reality which we wish to promote, and that is to build up championship teams with every student in the institution taking an active part in a wholesome and healthful way, and not at the expense of those who really need physical exercise and training.

The vacancy that was made last spring by the departure of Coach Clapp has been filled by Coach Willis Bates, whose strength of personality has won for him a lasting place in the hearts of every Southwestener, in spite of his previous position with the Wheatshockers. Bates' ability as coach has been shown by the way in which he handled a group of green, inexperienced men, turning out at the end of the football season a fighting, winning football machine. His work in basketball, baseball, and track has been but a repetition of his productive efforts in football, an explanation of which may be gained by studying his excellent system of organized class athletics. We don't wonder at his success when we count over a hundred men in football togs, and over a hundred and fifty under the basketball goals.

Lastly there comes to our mind the business men of Winfield, without whose hearty and helpful co-operation Southwestern's athletic standard could not exist. Their personal associations have been inspiring to us students and athletes, and their gifts of award have been an incentive to cleaner sports, to a greater general participation in systematic physical training, and therefore to a stronger and more able manhood and womanhood. To them we lift our hats.

DUDEY—"Well I've got a head, even if it is a bone."

The '14-'15 Football Season

DURING the summer of 1914 football prospects for the coming season looked most promising, but on the return of Coach Bates from the East it was found that Southwestern was to lose nearly the whole Championship Team of the preceding year. Leekley, Randels, Dadisman, Fred Hamilton, Will Hamilton, Moore, and Lear failed to return, while Bernstorf and Yeoman were lost through graduation. However, in spite of this handicap the coach set to work to build up a team from the ruins, and the raw recruits, fully realizing that nothing could be done for this season aside from laying a foundation for the season of 1915. Upon Zeigler's return from summer training in the harvest fields he was elected captain of the new squad. Rutledge was appointed manager, and under these officials a new but efficient team labored night after night, wearing off the roughness and gaining an admirable degree of skilled teamwork. Every man was endowed with a pluck that took him through the entire season, struggling his best every moment of practice. So wide spread was this feeling that hardly a man turned in his suit until the last whistle had blown, announcing the close of the 1914 football season.

Out of the nine games which Southwestern played three were won and six lost. The opening game was played against Cooper who had a team of "old heads" going at mid-sea form, and it was not very surprising that the small end of the 7-2 score came our way. The second game was played with K. S. A. C. at Manhattan. The Aggies were practically played off their feet during the entire game, but on account of inexperience and lack of sufficient head work on the part of the Moundbuilders, the latter lost 15-0. The next game was played at Wichita against the Quakers who later proved to be the surprise of the season, winning the State Title. Two years previous to this Southwestern had defeated the Friends team 154-0, but on this occasion we had to be satisfied with the nothing end of a 16-0 score, consoling ourselves with the idea that turn about is fair play. Coming back to Winfield we proceeded to lose a game to a team weaker than ourselves, allowing Fairmount to score twenty points to our nothing on three flukes. The first victory of the season for the Purple eleven characterized the next game which was played against Phillips University, this however, being a non-conference game. The team won seemingly against luck, working hard enough to have made fifty points, yet coming out of the game with but a lead of five points in the 12-7 score. The following game was the disappointment of the season. The confident Moundbuilders met the Ottawa Baptists with the expectation of adding another victory to their lone one. But to their keen disappointment they had to add the resulting zero to the lost column, allowing Ottawa to run off with twenty-two points. However, from this point, which was the low water mark of football for the season, the Moundbuilders began to climb. Doped to lose to Baker 70-0, they barely lost the game 14-13, having played against one of the strongest teams of the State and away from home. Fortune began smiling in earnest now and the next game, which was with St. Marys, resulted in a victory for Southwestern, the score reading 26-0.

The season, though not a success in point of games won, was nevertheless a big success in other ways. Coach Bates declares that the team was composed of the cleanest bunch of fellows and the best spirited sports with whom he had ever been connected, and that is saying a good deal in the face of the results of the season. Twelve men made their letters. They were Captain Zeigler, Captain Elect Robinson, Beck, Blackwelder, Hantla, Stansbury, Selfridge, Evans, Rutledge, Carlson, Kanaga, and White. The first three men made places on the All State teams and, best of all, everyone has expressed himself as expecting to return to Southwestern next year for the season of 1915.

The reserves or second team played games with the following schools: Arkansas City (twice), Blackwell, Mulvane, Anthony, Friends University Reserves (twice). Of these seven games two were won and five lost.

The 1914-1915 Basketball Season

SOUTHWESTERN'S basketball team this year was of championship mold even though the State Title did not come its way, but with every man back next year the prospects for securing the Title look promising. The men of a team that can meet and conquer other college teams of the State must necessarily have the spirit that makes them fight for each other and for the school team. This spirit was somewhat lacking in the first part of the season and accounts in part for our secondary position in the ranking of the teams of the State. However, as the season wore on this feeling became more noticeable, and during the last few games the team had really come to itself. An excellent schedule was played starting with three games on the home court. These three were followed by nine games away from home and then two more in Winfield.

The first three games of the season were played against Bethany, Cooper, and Friends University, Southwestern winning 37-25, 36-25, and 35-25, respectively. These victories were followed by a defeat at Emporia on the court of the State Normal; score, 29-21. Two other games were played on this same trip, one against Bethany and won by the Moundbuilders, 29-20, and the other against Cooper, also won by the Moundbuilders, 44-19. From this time on conditions and injuries figured strongly in the work of the team which lost its second game of the season shortly afterwards to the Quakers at Wichita, the latter taking the big end of the 38-28 score. Coming back strong for Fairmount, however, the Purple seven succeeded in scoring twenty-six points to the former's twenty-three in a hard fought battle. The Moundbuilders broke even on the next trip abroad, taking the game from Ottawa, 33-30, and accepting a forfeit from St. Marys, but losing to both Washburn and Baker, 33-24 and 49-33, respectively. Southwestern forfeited the next game which was to have been with Baker on the home court, and then came back strong for two more glorious victories over Fairmount, her old rival, and Ottawa, the former score being 32-21 and the latter 36-35. Thus the season ended with ten victories and five defeats for the Moundbuilders.

Men who made basketball letters are: Hamilton, Robieson, Zeigler, Captain Balckwelder, Beck, and Warren. Newman, Kanaga, Whitt, Jackson, and Rutledge also played in a few of the first team games, and displayed a surprising excellence of skill that exists outside the immediate team.

Southwestern in Tennis

LAST year saw a marked interest in tennis on the part of Southwestern students, resulting in a greater number being on the courts than ever before. This interest was carried through the entire season and accompanied Southwestern's teams in their various and successful contests.

Leila English and Celia Light composed the women's team for 1914, while Merb Warren and Herbert Vaughn represented the men. The teams from five different colleges were played by these two, resulting in several new victories to be added to the Moundbuilders' increasing list. The men's and the women's teams of Friends University were played at the beginning of the season on Southwestern's court with the following results: The Southwestern women won from Friends University women in the singles, 6-0, 6-0, 6-0, and in the doubles 6-1, 6-1, 6-0; the Southwestern men defeated their opponents 6-1, 6-1, but lost the doubles to them in a return match at Wichita. The men's team next played the Bethany team at Lindsborg, winning both the singles and the doubles. The scores in singles were 6-1, 6-1, 6-2, and those in the doubles were 6-2, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4. The Kansas Wesleyan team was the next to fall before the Moundbuilders when the latter won the singles 6-2, 6-2, 6-3, and the doubles 6-2, 6-2. The habit of victory developed further when the successful Southwestern team defeated K. S. A. C. at Manhattan 7-5, 1-6, 6-3 in the singles and 6-4, 6-2 in the doubles. Baker furnished the last team for the Moundbuilders to defeat and took the small end of the 6-2, 6-4, 7-5, 6-4 score in singles as well as the same end of the 6-3, 1-6, 5-7 score in doubles.

Last fall Coach Bates, working in conjunction with Manager Dielmann, arranged a class tournament in tennis. The freshman class won this tournament and took the Loving Cup that was offered the winners by the Winfield Commercial Club. Last year's interest was revived during this tournament and is expected to carry the Moundbuilders through as successful a season as they experienced last year. Manager Dielmann is working on a strong schedule for this spring and is planning to send the teams to the State tournament at Emporia, Kansas.

Track and Field

THE men composing the track and field teams of Southwestern are natives of the Great Southwest where brawn and jack rabbit speed are aptly developed. That's "nuff sed" for it is more expressive in itself than could be any comments made upon it. The Moundbuilders, contenting themselves with two State records in the spring of '12, came back in the spring of '13 only to set two new records and take first place among the colleges of the conference in the State meet at Topeka. (K. S. A. C. took the meet, but was a member of the Missouri Valley League).

Therefore, with hopes high and everything in readiness, Southwestern was confident of winning the State meet of '14, which was held at Winfield under her own auspices. On the eve of the meet a heavy rain soaked the track and field so that the "dust lovers" of the Moundbuilder team were sadly handicapped. Randels, upon whom Southwestern's hopes rested, had been too much of a baseball enthusiast to get himself into proper condition for the meet and was unable to cope with "Red" Davis of Fairmount, but succeeded in getting away with six points. Leekley, the field man, was the big "IT" in the discus and captured seven points himself. Zeigler, the War Horse, was high man for Southwestern, totaling eight points in the shot put, in which he took first place, and two other events. Robieson, who had set a new pole vault record the year before, was seemingly handicapped by the mud and landed only second place, first place not even equaling the record that "Yank" had made before. Hodges, the long distance man, after chasing a Bakerite for a whole mile, had to be content with second place. However, he was beaten by an exceptionally good runner and deserves much credit for taking even a second. Carlson was a good man but inconsistent training proved his undoing. This is how he expresses himself this spring, "Watch my smoke on that long cow path this year."

Other men worked hard too to put S. C. on the top, but seemingly to no avail, third place coming to them at the end of the meet.

With the prosperous-looking freshman class into the game, the track and field prospects will take a bound. Men like Beck, the quarter speed-demon of Winfield High; Jump, the jumper and hurdler of Anthony; and other men like McKee, Selfridge, and Shidler, will make Southwestern wallop her opponents until they will forget that there ever was such a thing as a State championship at stake.

The Rooters' Club

THE NATIONAL GUARD

THE ROYAL AMAZON GUARD

THE National Guard and the Royal Amazon Guard have been the pep raisers of the Rooters' Club. This year has been called a pepless year in Southwestern, but the rooters have been on the job just the same and especially during the latter part of the season. It is to this organization in large part that Southwestern can credit the four championships that have been featured in this volume. Its support of the different teams that have represented the institution has instilled determination and persistence in the men that has resulted in repeated victories for the Royal Purple.

The Inter High School Track Meet

AS early as 1907 Southwestern Academy began acting as host to the high schools of southwest Kansas and northern Oklahoma in bringing about a friendly contest in events of track and field, as well as in literary matters. At first the evening contest was held only in oratory, but in 1911 declamation was added. It is now proposed for 1916 that a contest be held in extempore speaking. These meets have steadily grown in favor among the high schools; last year over forty schools were represented, while this year the number promises to reach at least fifty.

In the year 1913, under the management of Prof. Stickel who had succeeded the former efficient manager, Prof. R. B. Dunlevy, it was found advisable to divide the schools into two groups in oratory and declamation, and into three groups in track and field events. This change makes the system so involved that sufficient space is lacking in which to enumerate the various events of the contests along with their winners. Suffice it to say that competent judges in every event have rendered fair and unquestionable decisions that have met with the favor of everyone, and Southwestern Academy expects every school back again this year that has ever been in the contests before.

Football Championship 1913-14

BY F. H. CLAPP

EVERY generation of Freshmen looks with awe and wonder upon the never-to-be-forgotten heroes of the gridiron. The pulling power of a team or the beauty of a college girl are the Freshman's standard of comparison, and he will vote for the gridiron heroes every time. Years afterwards, when he has forgotten the lost bets that his loyalty cost him, he will still insist that the football team of his freshman year had the best players and was the most perfect machine that was ever handicapped by a college faculty. And such stories as he can tell. They go like this:

"What? That '07 team? Good night, man, where have you been? They may have been a good team in your day, but you should have been around in the fall of 1913.

"The first evening I went out on the field I saw a bunch of fellows standing around in one corner looking up into the air. Someone told me that Captain Bernstorf had just kicked the ball and they were waiting for it to come down. In the opposite corner of the field I saw a tall, angular fellow whom they called Bernie. I thought they were just kidding me, but don't you know that man made the All State full-back? He used to run along the side line and bet the rooters that he could spill some opponent before the ball was declared dead.

"I became pretty well acquainted with all the men. I was taking only seventeen hours work and so had considerable time to go around with them. There was one bunch, though, that I just couldn't get to go out in the evenings. They roomed across the street from the President, and those men never would break training. Oh, once in a while Randels would go to town for exercise but he made careful use of the street car so as not to tire himself out. And the way that man could play! I saw him pull down a pass one day with three men hanging to him; he was fast as a deer too, and drew a position as end on one of the All State teams.

"Leekley was another fellow that wouldn't break training. He played right tackle. He would work himself down to about a hundred and eighty pounds, then the way he would round the corner of a tackle swing reminded me of an express train that was five minutes late. He was rather modest though, so they gave him the position of Captain on one of the All State teams.

"Speaking of tackles, did you ever hear of Tiny Zeigler? He weighed only a hundred and eighty-five pounds so they called him Tiny. We always asked our opponents not to run any of their plays through his side of the line, and that way he was able to play for several years. He was chosen on the first All State team that year.

"That was the year, too, that Stansbury and J. E. Robinson played guards. They weighed about one hundred seventy-five and one hundred eighty-five pounds respectively and could stop anything that ever started through the middle of our line. They were shifted to tackle a few times and always made good. J. E. was billed for a tackle the next year.

"The middle of the line was plugged by Carlson who was on the job either on defence or offense. His unerring passes were a pleasure to everyone playing behind the line.

"The freshman class put one man on the team that year whom we called Rut, for short. He was the heavy weight at one hundred thirty-five pounds. He was nervy and sure as a tackler and worked well at quarter, although the most of his energies were spent at end.

"The regular quarter was some gun, weighing about a hundred and forty-five pounds. The girls called him Rex. That man handled the team just like a general, and his personal plays would put pep into any team. He was manager of the team that year too, and the way he treated the men when away on trips would make any bunch play. He secured a place as quarter on one of the All State teams.

"There was a fellow playing end and half and weighing a hundred and fifty pounds, who was a

PROF. NEFF—"How do we know, Mr. Martin, that Chaucer dictated his old English to a stenographer?"

MARTIN—"Look at the way it's spelled."

prince of a man. They called him Spink. He had managed the team during his junior year and played mighty good ball. They certainly missed him on the gridiron the following year.

"Bill Hamilton was another popular player that season, weighing about a hundred and sixty pounds. He could keep more signals in his 'bean' than any other man you ever saw, and made good in any position on the team. He was chosen manager for his senior year but didn't come back.

"Our back field was a 'thing of beauty and a joy forever.' It worked like a compound engine with all the modern improvements and didn't have to stop at any garage for gas, either. 'Butch' Hamilton and 'Smiley' Moore at halves, Lear at quarter, and Bernstorf at full with 'Spink' and 'Bill' to drop back on the halves if needed, made a back field that made the natives stare and pull their hair. 'Butch,' selected as half in the All State group, weighed a hundred and sixty pounds. He was a good ground gainer and a wonderful, smashing half. He was quick, too, to diagnose a play and broke up a great number of punts. 'Smiley,' the other half, weighing also a hundred and sixty, was a wonder with the ball. His runs were nothing short of sensational and his 'stiff-arm' was wicked. I told you about Bernstorf; he it was who started this story out with a kick out of sight. 'Bernie' always wore a dangerous, misleading smile that quite characterized him in his athletic career. He was another senior that the squad missed the next year.

"There were several men who played that year but who did not make their football letters. Dadisman at center helped bring back the 'bacon' from Manhattan, Blackwelder and Newman at guards played good ball, and Kanaga and White slipped into a few games to prove what they could do the next year.

"There was one fellow they called Doc. I asked him one day if he were an M. D. He said he was just a student, but he was certainly a genius. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if he could skin a lot of the professional trainers in the big universities. Take it all in all, he was the most valuable asset, I guess, around the gymnasium, and a lot of credit for the State Championship belongs to him."

THE BOY GRAD

Full many years have poets sung
  The sweet girl graduate,
And now again, with honeyed tongue,
  Her graces they relate.

But as for me, while I agree
  She is a winning lass,
I fain would sing in poetry
  The mankind of the class.

The boy grad has a double voice
  That glides from D to A.
His theme is deep, his language choice,
  His statements none gainsay.

He has exaggerated feet
  And seven pairs of hands;
He's nervous, sitting in his seat,
  Ans more so when he stands.

His hair's a sturdy pompadour;
  His brow is damp with sweat;
His eyes are fastened to the floor
  As if with glue—and yet

We doff our bonnet to the grad;
  He's awkward but he's game,
And (take it from us) he's the lad
  That gets there just the same.

(UNNAMED)

Why wilt thou visit in dreams?
  Once I beheld for a space
  Thy pure and passionless face,
  Thy pale, high, ivory brow;
But when thee to speech I would win,
    Only the high winter moon;
The cold moon at my window, looked in—
  The moon was thy beauty and thou!

Why wilt thou visit in dreams?
  With mocking mouth last night
  And teasing laughter light
  Thou cam'st, my heart knows how;
But when for thy mercy I pled,
    Only the winter wind;
The swift wind through my window sped—
  The wind was thy laugh and thou!

Why wilt thou visit in dreams?
  Methought bitter Love in thy guise
  Made sweet, passing sweet to my eyes,
  Beckoned to me but now;
But when to follow I turned,
    Only my aroused heart;
My boy's heart for the vanished yearned—
  My heart was Love and thou!

AMOR—CARITAS

I kissed her lips; my soul burned out intense,
  And in mine ears loud trumpets crashed salute.
Soon bitter loathing sickened every sense,
  And in my mouth was dust of Dead Sea Fruit.

I grasped his hand; his brave voice named my name.
  Toward his clear soul I felt my full heart yearn,
Glowing with noble friendship's generous flame,
  Pure and serene as Vesta's fire eterne.

Emery E. Neff.

PROF. BALDWIN—"Oh, Gee Whiz!"

LIFE

I have been east of Eden, close by the garden
Heard at night alone in the desert murmurs,
Gurgling water, lisp of leaves in the distance shaking,
Exquisite sweetness.

Lured by life, dead hopes rearose with daring;
Swift I sped through darkness 'till lo! the perfume
Borne by breezes slow from the inmost bowers
Smote on my nostrils,

Filled my throbbing veins with the joy of living,
Nerves dissolved, and melted my soul with pleasure;
Dared I hope to taste in a wondrous moment
Fruit of the Life-tree?

Thus was tranced when sudden the sun of morning
Stabbed the dark, revealing a flaming sword, bared,
Cold, and keen, and over the wall the angels'
Implacable faces.

TO VASHTAI (a la mode francaise)

To me last night at the ball disconsolate
Whilst la dame sans merci sulked in her bower,
Each maiden seemed to faintly imitate
Some charm of those the gods upon you shower.
One had your pout I fain would kiss away,
One had your mocking eyes, one had your fair
Pale hands, and one I fancied to display
The luring splendor of your perilous hair,
Afflicting with vain dreams each luckless wight.
And me by your scattered beauties rare
Recalled yourself, who could them all unite,
Possessing what each could in no wise spare.
Whilst thus I owned your person's matchless might
And bitterly bemoaned your cold disdane,
A sudden, one face there bewitched me quite.
In pledge of truth, behold my broken chain.

Emery E. Neff.

PROF. MARSHALL (from the telephone)—"Oh, I can't get Jack, can you?"
VELMA—"Why I don't know, I haven't tried yet."

Note: The foregoing statistics are a new departure in the construction of the Southwestern Moundbuilder. No accurate records concerning the whereabouts of former students have been kept by the college, and therefore this data has been compiled for the first time by the Moundbuilder Management. This means that there must be several errors in spite of the great care attending the arrangement of names, dates, and localities. The Management regret these mistakes and, along with the college, will appreciate any corrections which the readers of this book may make and send to the institution.

Championship Debate Year

THE year of 1914 was one of the most successful years in debate that the history of Southwestern can record. In that year Ottawa, Emporia, and Park fell before our legions of forensic fame.

The First Preliminary Debate was held in the college chapel on the evening of December 16, 1913. About fourteen men entered and discussed pro and con the merits of Compulsory Federal Industrial Insurance. The result of the Preliminary was the placing of J. Fuller Groom, Howard White, Vincent Hiebsch, Nelson Gardner, Linn Beebe, and Tien Lan Lin upon the college debate squad in the order named. To these were added Thos. A. Williams and Rufus C. Baker as first and second alternates respectively.

On April 7th, in the college chapel, Park College of Missouri, flushed with her victory over Southwestern in the previous year, met our team of Hiebsch, Gardner and Groom. This debate was the concluding one of the three year contract with Park. The first debate was a victory for Southwestern through the efforts of Coldwell, Crookham, and Timmons. The second debate, held at Park, in which Timmons, Gardner, and Schmidt participated, was won by Park. Both teams, therefore, were keyed to the highest tension in this concluding contest, and the efforts made were of the highest order. When the smoke of conflict cleared away, Groom's team had covered themselves with glory, and a unanimous decision was added to the "won" column of Southwestern's debate record.

May 8, 1914 was the next memorable day of the debate year. It also marked the conclusion of a triangular contract with Ottawa University and the College of Emporia. Four debates had been held with each of these schools previous to this time, with the result of an even break with the Baptists and four straight victories over the Presbyterians. The plan of the triangular was that each school should have two teams and debate both sides of the same question, one team remaining at home and the other one going to the home of an opponent. Emporia sent one team to Ottawa, Ottawa sent one to Southwestern, and Southwestern sent one to Emporia.

On Friday morning, May 8th, in company with the Coach of Debate Southwestern's fighting trio, consisting of Beebe, Hiebsch, and Baker, invaded the Presbyterian's stronghold. The remainder of the day was spent in preliminaries and rest before the Titanic conflict of the evening. On the same day, led by a former Southwestener, the Baptists entered the precincts of Winfield and Southwestern College. The home team of Williams, White, and Groom were in the finest condition, and as a mighty ocean liner, conscious of its strength, strains at its hawsers before putting to sea, they impatiently awaited the coming conflict.

Soon after eight o'clock that evening the battle was on. Like the battles of Trojan and Greek, the debate was anybody's throughout, for foeman met foeman who was worthy of this truest steel. The Recall of the State Judiciary was nicely mended only to be torn into shreds by the opponent who followed. When the last arguments and rebuttals had been given, all anxiously awaited the results. As President Mossman stepped forward to read the decision that was to win or lose a debate and a championship to Ottawa, the most intense silence prevailed. The decision was read and pandemonium broke loose; Southwestern had won, and Groom had added another victory to his honor, but this time by the slender margin of two to one. Impatiently then we waited for the news from Emporia. Could the achievement of the four previous debates be duplicated? It must be! A team was there who could and who would turn the trick for the fifth consecutive time. At about ten-thirty the wires flashed the glorious message, "VICTORY." It too had been dearly won by one vote.

Thus concluded the Championship Year in Debate. A record that future leaders in forensics can hope to equal, but one which they can never excel.

RED SOUDERS—"Yes, sir, professor, the telegraph wire does."

OUR

WINFIELD

THE environment of a college is almost as important as its course of study. The spirit of the city, its ideals and aspirations, inevitably react upon its institutions. Are its citizens narrow and selfish? Then its education must suffer. Or its broad-minded culture respected and idealized? Then will schools of higher learning flourish.

In view of these facts, then, we ask you to consider "Our City." Review with us a few of her excellencies and then see if you do not understand why she has earned the title, "The Athens of the West."

AN EDUCATIONAL CENTER

Public Schools. Winfield's public schools are among the finest of the State. Five ward schools and a modern high school have this year enrolled 1,575 of Winfield's 8,000 people. Of these 509 are high school students who receive instruction from a faculty of 20 members.

College of Music. The Southwestern School of Music is not the only institution of this sort the city affords. The Winfield College of Music has a large number of students enrolled under a faculty which numbers 11. Instruction is offered in all popular branches of musical training.

St. John's College. Nor is Southwestern the only college in the city. The German Lutherans from all over the Middle West send their children to St. John's. One large administration building and a new gymnasium constitute the equipment in buildings of this institution. There are 10 members of their faculty and 110 students.

Chautauqua. This is the organization in which, perhaps more than any other, the whole city takes pride. It is not a "mail-order" attraction arranged by some bureau in Chicago or New York; it is a real Chautauqua modeled after the original which is situated near Chautauqua Lake, New York. Like the original, this Chautauqua has permanent buildings and grounds. It has ten departments, including English Literature, Bible Study, Home Economics, and Kindergarten work, all of which are conducted by leaders in these particular lines. One hour every day is given to each department so that the greater part of the benefits derived from this real Chautauqua are additional to the afternoon and evening lectures or entertainments. The latter have an average attendance of 2,000, while frequently on Sundays or special occasions crowds of five or six thousand are on the grounds. Fully half of those who attend all the sessions of the Assembly camp on the cool, shady grounds of Island Park.

This Chautauqua is a permanent part of the city's life. Twenty-seven sessions that have already been held go to prove this statement. A board of twenty-one men from the various churches, business concerns, and professions serve without pay in the work of securing platform talent and in controling the affairs of the Assembly. Such an institution, freely supported by the public-spirited men of the city, is indeed one of the best advertisements for the educational standards of Winfield.

Public Library. For two years Winfield has had, beside the school libraries, a well built, well located, and well equipped public library. Of this, both students of Southwestern and the general public have made much use, as attested by the 15,888 loans made the first eleven months of its existence. On its shelves are 4,525 volumes aside from unclassified government reports. Its spacious reading rooms and well-chosen newspapers and periodicals make it a pleasant place for college students to spend their leisure time when down town.

A City of Churches

WINFIELD is a convincing demonstration that education and religion are not antagonistic, for she is not only an educational center, but is also a center of churches and religious influence. College and high school professors are counted among the more than fifty per cent of Winfield's population which claims membership in some one of her many churches.

Fourteen organizations, representing eleven different denominations, are located here. Between these different sects an admirable spirit of unity and brotherhood prevails, as witnessed by the large union revival services held last October, as well as the union Sunday evening services held during the summer.

The people of Winfield are deeply interested in their churches. They have spent nearly one hundred fifty thousand dollars the last few years in enlarging or rebuilding their churches. The eight hundred members of the First Methodist Church, the five hundred belonging to the Presbyterians, and the three hundred seventy-five members of the Christian Church have each built beautiful, modern edifices during the past few years. Grace Methodist, the college church, was remodeled and enlarged two years ago.

Though the city is almost equally divided between members and non-members, the fifty per cent who are members is not largely restricted to women. The men of Winfield take an active part in church work. Their Brotherhoods are especially prominent in the five largest churches. The Brotherhood of the First Methodist Church is the largest, numbering almost two hundred. Among its extensive enterprises for the betterment of the city is the Winter Lecture Course, which is largely attended by both the college students and the people of the city.

The city Y. M. C. A. is another evidence of the interest taken in upholding the moral standards of the community. Many college students are members of this Association.

Taken all in all, Winfield is indeed a center of cultured refinement and religious zeal. It furnishes an ideal location for a Christian College.

A "Live" City

CHURCHES and schools do not make Winfield a "dead" city as such institutions are by some people supposed to do. Instead, Winfield is as much alive as any city in this part of the country.

How can this be proved? First consider her live Commercial Club with almost three hundred members. This club is always on the lookout for bringing new industries to the city. Within the last year a milk condensary has been "landed" through the efforts of the club. Then the club has a "Booster" Committee which is still more actively engaged in keeping Winfield on the map. Every year they make auto trips, visiting neighboring towns in Kansas and Oklahoma, spreading good-fellowship and advertising Winfield's merits. A Southwestern car always goes on these trips.

Besides all her wide-awake merchants with their up-to-date stores, Winfield is especially noted for her banks. They occupy a unique position due to their refusal to follow the other banks of the nation, both in the panic of 1907 and in the flurry of last summer, in holding back specie payments. Winfield banking institutions, due to the good sense of her bankers and the level-headedness of her citizens, are "as strong as Gibralter."

Winfield is a live city as proved by her clean appearance. Mile after mile of brick and macadam paving make her streets a pleasing foreground for her beautiful homes, as well as for her stores and public buildings.

Finally, Winfield is a progressive city because her government is above reproach. Due largely to her educated citizenship, there is such a highly developed public conscience that city ownership and control of water and light plants can be economically managed above suspicion of graft.

This is the city with which Southwestern cooperates in training public-spirited citizens, by providing the essentials of a higher Christian education.

The Winfield Orchestral Club

THIS is another of the organizations that is responsible for Winfield's popularity as a modern and up-to-date city. Professor Edgar B. Gordon, through this system of Community Music which he himself has organized, has attracted the attention of educators all over the United States, and was but recently called upon to read a paper before one of their meetings in the east upon the successes and general merits of the system.

A series of Educational Concerts is rendered each year by the Orchestral Club in combination with various choruses. These concerts have so well met the approval of the public that next year they are to be combined with the regular Winter Lecture Course, numbers alternating with those of the professional nature.

REACTION

I hate that base submission, mate of mine,
That ever ready is to heed and bow
Before tradition. Highly do I now
Assure thee that the love, so free, of thine,
I treasure and I honor as divine.
More dear to me thy love becomes since thou
Hast paid more dearly for it. Here I vow
To take with thee whate'er the fates assign.
Yet why, oh heart of hearts, didst thou mistrust
Me? Thinkest thou my soul was not aware
Of that great virtue which indwells in thee?
Think not, because my slower nature must
Move slowly toward its end, that doubt was there.
Yet this doth not decrease love's mystery.

—A Humble Man, '16.

STIMULUS

O, thou! My mate of all the world of men,
For whom alone my pulses joyous sing,
Because I know thy tested thoughts true ring
I trample custom and this message pen:
My love has never base surrendered been.
I gloat in it as my soul's blossoming,
And so refuse to be thy maid, plaything,
Or aught but true companion. Thou must ken
That strength and purity we share the same.
God made us so; then I may take a hand
At life as thou. To force to correspond
To thee in all, were but a soul to maim.
Assert thy vaunted reason, self-command.
Admit that freedom is a perfect bond.

Interested Friend—"And what are you going to be after you leave college, Pearl?"

Pearl Mann—"Why-a, O, I can't think what they are called now; it's one of those people who go around chasing bugs."

Friend—"O, do you mean a chamber-maid?"

Says Souders—"I was smart even when I was a boy. Why I had more in my head than any other boy in the neighborhood, and believe me, everytime I got out among people I sure got rid of the knowledge."

Zeigler—"I should say so!"

Souders—"Huh?"

Frances Shaw picked up the little note and read, "I met you last——— at the———ball and you smiled at me. Come down this evening at eight, I'll be waiting at the———hotel.—Herman.

Francis—"I wonder who that is? I believe I'll go down."

Pearl—"No don't, he was waiting there last year too, I think he gets his board and room there for waiting."

Abe was visiting some friends in the country and, not wishing to stand idle while every one else was busy with the chores, went in about milking time after a milk pail. He had started toward the cow sheds, thrilling with pleasure over the thought that he was truly of some use to somebody, when one of the farm hands stabbed him with this remark, "What! You goin' to milk in them clothes?"

"No, no," replied Abe without even turning his head, "In the bucket."

Helen Dalbom went to her first football game (as all of us must do sooner or later). As the players ran out for the first kick off, Helen was heard to say half aloud, "Why I don't see any cripples out there." A fellow onlooker heard the remark that wasn't meant for him at all and said, "Of course not now; the game has only begun."

"Well, but," said Helen, "I though the half backs and quarter backs played in the first part of the game too."

The other day a freshman was complaining about the way his landlady salted the food she put on the table, and this was how another of the same hue explained it. "Now, you see salt doens't cost very much. If they feed you a little salt, you'll drink lots of water. Water doesn't cost anything and when you're full of water, you can't hold any ham or grape fruit. It's purely a business principle. See?"

Gardner was out of sorts. The sun was hot, he was perspiring both from physical exertion and from mental impatience, and he was smeared from head to feet with dirty grease. He stopped to collect his thoughts for one more try before giving up entirely when his tired gaze encountered a stranger standing silently looking on. After having been seen, the stranger felt moved to say something of a sympathetic nature, so he asked, "Why, how did your Ford get clear up there in that tree?"

Gardner replied, "Aw, I was crankin' her up and the blame thing flew off the handle."

Crookham ran lightly up the front steps and gave the door bell a vigorous yank. The hall inside echoed and reechoed the clatter of the gong and soon the door was opened a crack, the opening however being filled by a nervous form who inquired in an anxious voice what was wanted. The woman had never seen Arthur before so he had to explain, which he did by asking, "Is Pauline in?"

"Yes, sir, but she's engaged now."

"Sure, I know it!" replied Crookham, "I'm what she's engaged to."

"Professor," said Rufus Gray, approaching Prof. Dunlevy with a perplexed look on his face, "I saw a peculiar thing this morning that would be quite unbelieveable, had I not seen it with my own eyes. My watch stopped some time last night, and when I examined it after breakfast this morning to see what was the cause, I found a bed bug tangled up in the works."

"A bed bug," mused the professor, "I wonder how a bed bug could have gotten into the mechanism of a watch."

"Well sir," answered Rufus, "I figured that it must have crawled in between the ticks."

At a recent "spread" the subject of spoons was being discussed.

"I have fourteen spoons now," remarked Hazel proudly.

"Fourteen!" ejaculated Ross in surprise, "Well, if you had one more, you'd do all right."

They say Hazel has another one now.

Fee was on his way back to Winfield at the close of the spring term vacation. As the train approached a little station on this side of Mulvane, he left his seat and went out into the vestibule of the car. The train stopped and the conductor helped Hazel Wells up the steps. Fee, who was waiting at the top of the steps, reached down without a word and took the lady's suit case, then stepped back for her to precede. At this point Hazel looked up for the first time and beheld her benefactor in mazement. "Why!" she exclaimed, "I didn't know that was you; I thought it was the porter."

First Templin—"What kind of a bracelet did you say you got her for Christmas?"

Second Templin—"Fourteen carat."

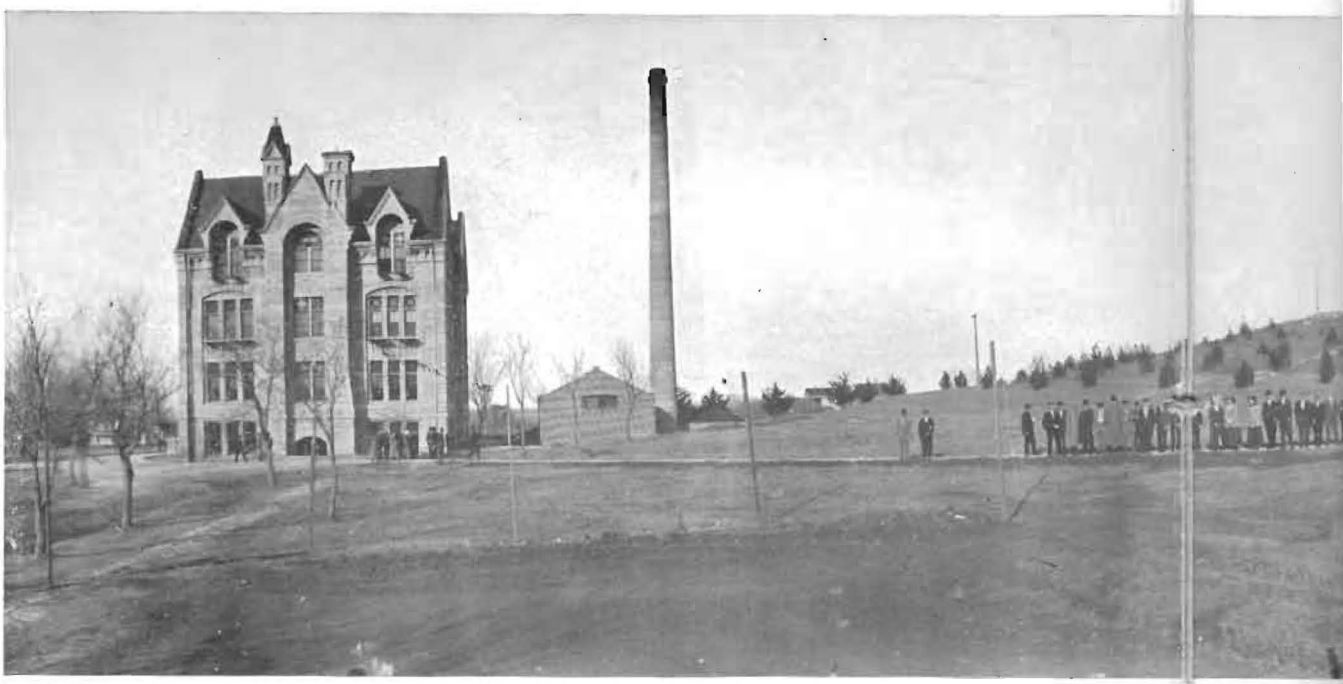
SOUTHWESTERN COLLEGE

Southwestern College now has a plant and endowment valued at $300,000; a plan has been launched to increase the latter to half a million. This is an evidence of the recognition of the worth of the college to the Southwest. In fact, Southwestern's alumni make good; more than 80 per cent are active in professional life. Those now pursuing graduate or professional courses in Eastern universities are rated among the best. The final test of a college is its output.



Instruction is offered in the College of Liberal Arts, and five associated schools: Academy, Oratory, Art, Music, and Business. Southwestern affords the positive advantages of a small college. The Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. are very active; two Gospel Teams were sent out during the Christmas holidays. The literary societies are among the best in the State and are splendidly equipped. Southwestern's oratory and debate record is unsurpassed. Vigorous but clean athletics are encouraged.

SOUTHWESTERN COLLEGE

Southwestern is just closing its most successful year. The occupation of Richardson Hall, the refurnishing of the laboratories and the enrichment of the library have added greatly to the ease and efficiency of college work. The department of Liberal Arts continues to increase. The freshman class numbers 96 and the senior class 34. The faculty, university trained, numbers 21, while the entire enrollment stands at 389, 270 of which are in the College of Liberal Arts. The Southwestern spirit is evident—intense, enthusiastic and sane.

Next year Southwestern College plans for still better things. No high school senior will make a mistake in choosing Southwestern as his college. Over 60 per cent of the students are self-supporting, than which there are no better. Where there's a will there's a way. The place for the child of the Christian home is in the Christian College. Agnes Cole—"Say, what did Miss Doran leave class the other day for?"
Ethel—"O, Gordon was killing a cat and wanted an audience."

Bennett had finished his music lesson and at the close looked up at the professor, and in an eager tone of voice asked, "Well, professor, how did I sing that one?"

"Two rooms just big enough for two," replied Prof. Marshall.

"How's that?" asked the puzzeled pupil, unable to comprehend the instructor's remarks.

"In other words, just a little flat."

Bennett fell.

Fuller and Lorene were a trifle late, in fact they arrived just at the close of the fifth inning. "What's the score?" asked Groom of a neighboring fan.

"Nothing to nothing so far," was the answer.

"O, goody!" cried Lorene joyously, "We haven't missed a thing, have we?"

A young woman was in the company of a gentleman college student recently and naturally the conversation finally drifted to the subject of books.

"And what do you think of Fielding, Mr. Selfridge?" asked the lady.

"Well, of course," was the shocking reply, "fielding is important, but the team can't do much without a good pitcher."

In a recent quiz which was given for the sole purpose of testing the pupil's general knowledge, this question was offered for solution, "What was the great Napoleon's nickname?"

To this question one of the Freshmen (whose name we are not permitted to publish) gave this astonishing answer, "Napoleon's nickname was 'The Little Corpustle.'"

"Salser—"Gardner, I want some advise. Some men say they are sorry they are married, while others say they are sorry they are not married. I want you to set me straight out of your own experience."

Gardner—"Well, it's better to be sorry you are not than sorry you are."

This is the book agent's style when he is trying to make his way through college:

"I called to see if I could sell you a book."

"What do I want the book for?"

"For two dollars."

"But what made you think I wanted the book?"

"Two dollars."

Gardner—"It takes a pretty progressive congregation to keep from laying down on a preacher every time he wants to start something new."

Prof. Baldwin—"Yes, that's the reason they're called laymen."

Coppedge- "I've found that a preacher wears out more tugs than backing straps."

Keep the happy memory of School Days for all time. Your graduation portraits and those of your classmates—precious to you now—will be priceless in years to come.

We are exhibiting new and attractive styles of school pictures that will make most appropriate class gifts and which are priced consistently.
